FOREWORD

In 1697, Adolphus Philipse, second son of the first Lord of the Manor of Philipsborough, purchased from Lambert Dortlandt and Jan Sybrandt, who had bought it a few years before from the Wiccopee chiefs, a tract of land which became known as the Highland Patent. This tract extended approximately 20 miles along the east shore of the Hudson, from Annsville Creek to the Fish Kill, and eastward some 20 odd miles to the border of the Connecticut Province. The Patent included Polopel Island in the Hudson River.

Shortly after his purchase, Adolphus Philipse, who made his residence at the Castle near Tarrytown and maintained only a bachelor shooting lodge on Lake Mahopac in the Highland Patent, opened the tract to tenant settlers. It was his continued policy through 50 years, and the policy of his heirs, to rent, not to sell, land. The family was particularly jealous of the property on the river front.

The Highland Patent was incorporated in the County of Dutchess and was known as the "South Precinct". In 1812 all but a very small portion of this south Precinct was cut off from Dutchess County and became Putnam County.

* * *

In 1704, Lord Cornbury, Governor of the Province of New York and a cousin of Queen Anne, ordered the development of a road on the Hudson's east shore connecting New York with Albany. This Queen's Highway, later the King's Highway, became the Albany Post Road and in recent years a large portion of U. S. Route 9.

Previous to Lord Cornbury's road building, there had existed roads from New York to the villages in Westchester County as far north as Yorktown and from Fish Kill Village and the settlements in northern Dutchess County to Albany, but the 20 odd miles through the Highlands between Annsville Creek and the Fish Kill remained wilderness, broken only by Indian trails. The road which was put through this part of Adolphus Philipse's Highland Patent in the first decade of the Eighteenth Century was little better than a trail, being unfit for wheeled traffic for many years. This section of the King's Highway, later the Post Road, was spoken of as "The Path".

Soon after the opening of "The Path", hardy pioneers began to move northward from Westchester County into the Highland Patent. Among these early settlers were John Rogers, who built on "The Path" on the hill between Philipse and Indian Brooks; David Hustace (Hustis) who settled on "The Path" in the North Highlands on the brook running into the Fish Kill; Jacob Mandeville, near Four Corners, Garrison; and Thomas Davenport, who rented land, built his log house, and raised his large family on land at the base of Bull Hill extending from "The Path" to the Hudson. He was the first settler on the river in the Philipse Upper Patent.

The first mill available to these pioneers was that built by Roger and Cathryna Brett on the north bank of the Fish Kill. Settlers on the Highland Patent north of Philipse Brook rode their sacks of grain to Madam Brett's mill to be ground. Settlers along "The Path" in the mountains south of Philipse Brook found it easier to have their grain ground and do their trading at Yorktown, or, later at Beverly Robinson's Red Mill at Mahopac Falls. Thus came about the geographical division of the North and the South Highlands. Only after the Revolution was a mill built on Indian Brook at the crossing of the Post Road, available to farmers in both directions. This mill, operated first by a Warren, later by Nelsons, descendants of the Warrens, became the center of communal life in that part of the township.

The house by the mill, built during or immediately after the Revolution by Captain John Warren of the Dutchess County Militia, was a tavern on the stage coach route along the Post Road, which passed close by it. Mail was dropped there to be picked up by residents in the neighborhood. Court was held in the big room of the tavern. Religious services were held there by itinerant ministers, including the Rev. Silas Constant of the church at Yorktown. A school was built near the mill. The later yellow brick schoolhouse on this site served the district until 1931 and still stands. The manuscript "REKORD" kept by successive clerks of the School Trustees from 1844 to 1931, is among the rare books of the Butterfield Memorial Library in Cold Spring, New York.

Later, the Highland Turnpike was cut from Warren's Mill south to a new crossing of Annsville Creek, skirting the mountain ridge and thus avoiding the steep grades which were dangerous in all weathers for stage coaches. From the opening of the Pike, travel along the Post Road (once "The Path") between Warren's and Continental Village was limited to local farmers. The old road with its milestones, continued as it had been since the days of the Revolution. People living along the Post Road, to reach the new Pike, had to drive to Warren's Mill—later Nelson's —where the mail coaches made regular stops. A road following Indian Brook running from the Sunk Mines down to the Hudson at Nelson's Landing passed in front of the mill and the miller's house.

Here, in the old roomy house built by Captain John Warren, was born in 1840, a descendant of the house's first owner, James Nelson. In his veins ran the blood of Warrens, Nelsons, Rogerses, Haights and Davenports—all pioneer settlers of the Highland Patent. His entire life was lived there. He was a miller, farmer, school trustee, Justice of the Peace. He married Mary Forman, a granddaughter of Gilbert Forman, formerly of Yorktown, who had moved up "The Path" shortly after the Revolution to settle on a large farm east of the Post Road and north of Indian Brook.

James Nelson was an ardent student of local history and genealogy. He devoted more than forty years of his life to collecting data on the families from whom he was descended. In the course of this research, which presented many difficulties in the days before automobiles, telephones and electric lights, he scraped the lichen off tombstones in abandoned burial grounds to decipher almost illegible inscriptions, studied faded entries in family Bibles, questioned the elderly residents, read wills, deeds and county records, carefully noted names, relationships and dates. It was said he never missed a funeral and the gathering of relatives after the burial, when family histories would be discussed. By this prodigious and careful labor he compiled a genealogy of the descendants of THOMAS DAVENPORT, "Pioneer" settler of Philipstown, who became a tenant of Adolphus Philipse before 1732.

Until the establishment of Putnam County in 1812, all this present county was the Southern Precinct of the County of Dutchess. For this reason, records of dates before 1812 are found at Poughkeepsie, county seat of Dutchess. The Southern Precinct (sometimes called Philipse Precinct) of Dutchess was divided into four, later five, and finally six townships. Philipstown, a name which occurs frequently in this genealogy, refers to the township which extends the entire river length of the present Putnam County, and approximately five miles eastward of the river.

After the death of Adolphus Philipse (1749), the Highland Patent was inherited by his nephew, Frederick Philipse, his only heir-at-law, and Lord of the Manor at Phillipsburg in Westchester County. At the death of Frederick Philipse in 1751, the Highland Patent was inherited by his son, Philip Philipse, and three daughters, Susannah (wife of Beverly Robinson), Mary (later wife of Col. Roger Morris), and Margaret, who died intestate. Margaret's portion was, by terms of her father's will, equally divided among her brother and sisters, and in 1754, after a survey of the whole tract, it was geographically divided into nine Lots; three on the river; three in the interior; three on the eastern (Connecticut) border. Each of the three heirs inherited a Lot in each division.

Our interest centers in the three Lots on the Hudson known as Water Lot No. 1, Water Lot No. 2, and Water Lot No. 3. These were the property, respectively of Susannah Philipse, wife of Col. Beverly Robinson; of Philip Philipse, whose wife was Margaret Marston; and of Mary Philipse, who married Col. Roger Morris.

Thomas Davenport, the Pioneer, and his sons were tenants on Water Lot No. 2. Their landlord, after the death of Adolphus Philipse, was Philip Philipse, then his widow, and, finally, her son, Frederick, known as "Captain Philipse", when he came from New York to live on his Hudson River estate immediately after 1800.

Susannah Philipse married Beverly Robinson of Virginia, July 7, 1748, and they came in 1764 to live at "Beverly" on the banks of the Hudson nearly opposite West Point. Beverly Robinson managed his wife's, her sister's and brother's estates in the Highlands. "Beverly" was the manor house of the entire Patent. It was situated on Water Lot No. 1, a mile south of the house of Jacob Mandeville, who had married Sarah, a daughter of THOMAS DAVENPORT, "The Pioneer". Robinson was a member of the vestry of St. Peter's Church at Cortlandtville, Westchester County, and later of its Chapel of St. Philip's, at the present settlement of Garrison, Putnam County. So, too, was Thomas Davenport, eldest son of "The Pioneer".

During the Revolution, on Oct. 22, 1779, the New York State Legislature at Kingston passed an Act attainting fifty-eight persons of "adhering to the King with intent to subvert the government and liberties of this State and the said other United States, and to bring the same into subjection to the Crown of Great Britain". The Act confiscated their real and personal estates and declared that "each and every one of them who shall at any time hereafter be found in any part of the State shall be and are hereby adjudged and declared guilty of felony, and shall suffer Death as in cases of felony, without Benefit of Clergy".

Under this terrible ban fell Frederick Philipse, third Lord of the Manor of Philipsborough; his sister Susannah and her husband, Colonel Beverly Robinson, then commanding the Loyal American Regiment which he had raised in the Tory cause; and Mary Philipse Morris with her husband.

The three young sons of the late Philip Philipse, being minors, were not attainted and their estate in the Highlands was not confiscated.

The confiscated properties were sold at auction by the Commissioners of Forfeiture and thereby some of the old tenants on Water Lots 1 (very few) and 3 were able to buy the lands they formerly had rented. The tenants on Water Lot No. 2 were not so fortunate. The old leases were retained until after the Census of 1800. Then, Captain Frederick Philipse, sole surviving son of Philip Philipse, came with his daughter Mary and her husband Samuel Gouveneur to take up residence on Water Lot No. 2. He built the house known through the next half-century as "The Grange" on the river bank close to the outlet of Philipse Brook. In 1803 he had his property surveyed and divided into one hundred farms. Some of these he sold. Other parcels of property he refused to sell at the time and he cancelled the leases on these as they fell due. Thus came about the far-reaching changes in ownership during the decade between the Census of 1800 and that of 1810. At this time, a number of families, former tenants, sold the "improvements" they had put on their leaseholds and moved out of Philipstown to counties where they could become landowners and not renters.

Among these was William Davenport (II 5), Revolutionary soldier, who had lived in the house built by his father, Thomas Davenport (I 1), close to Indian Brook.

In 1812, as has been said, the Southern Precinct of Dutchess County was formed into Putnam County. Five years later an even greater change took place with the purchase of a large portion of what had formerly been the leasehold of Thomas Davenport, "The Pioneer", by the West Point Foundry Association. The Foundry (Sec. IV) was built at the mouth of Margaret's Brook, and a village, which took its name from the "cold spring" by the water front, succeeded the former "Davenport's Landing".

This is the historical background of the Davenport family of Philipstown.

The "Cold Spring", marked on many old sailing charts of the Hudson River as a place where sloops could fill their casks with pure water, was on "The Pioneer's" leasehold. However, he built his first house of logs three-quarters of a mile up the hill close to another fine spring, which later became known as the "Fountain Head". The log house burned down one winter's night, according to local tradition, but was replaced by a frame farmhouse. Some time later there was also a cider mill on the brook below the Fountain Head. Before 1819 the old Davenport house had been sold to Benjamin Briggs. Portions of it survived the changes incident to laying out Main Street of the Village of Cold Spring, until shortly before World War II.

From Thomas Davenport's twelve children, many of whom were born in the old log house by the Fountain Head, descend, among others, the local families of Nelson, Henyan, Hustis, Knapp, Warren, Ferris, Haight and Mekeel, many of them still resident and active in Philipstown, and descend families living all over the United States. Philipstown no longer stretches "five miles eastward from the river"—but from the Hudson to the Pacific, and from Maine to Florida.

At the death of James Nelson, his son, the Rev. Homer Nelson of Bar Harbor, Maine, presented his father's papers to the Putnam County Historical Society. In 1956, the Directors of the Society voted to have the Davenport Papers edited for publication and appointed a Committee to undertake the work. In time, through locating and establishing contacts with many Davenport descendants in other and distant parts of the country, and with whom Mr. Nelson had never corresponded, many of the gaps in the genealogy, as he had prepared it, were filled in, lines were brought down to the present, several wills, a Revolutionary record, as well as, many family traditions, were added by the Committee to the original manuscript.

After three years of work, the Committee here presents the history of Philipstown's pioneer settler, THOMAS DAVENPORT, as the facts concerning him and many of his innumerable descendants have been established.

Since the above Foreword was written, the Committee has suffered two great losses in the deaths of Miss Jessica Reid and Miss Dorothy Giles. Miss Giles was a professional writer with an avid interest in local history. She initiated and directed this project; compiled the early records and gathered the genealogical data from the descendants and other sources; and wrote many of the incidental tales. Indeed, her enthusiasm was so contagious, that considerable data continued to pour in (even today!) long after her death. Mrs. Irma Franklin, who assisted Miss Giles in the editing and compilation of the records, assumed the responsibility for the completion of the project—a booklet that grew into a book.

This volume has been produced by the volunteer efforts of a few members of the Putnam County Historical Society with little professional experience, but a dedication to the aims of the Society to keep our heritage alive. We hope you will find it worthy of our efforts.

INTRODUCTION

1. Early Davenport Records

According to the elaborate genealogy published in Amzi Benedict Davenport's book on the forbears of the Rev. John Davenport of New Haven, Connecticut, the English line of Davenports extends back to 1089 when family names first came into general use. The founder of the line was Orme, said to be a cousin of William the Conqueror, who came with him to England. He took the family name from the town of Devonport and was the first of a long procession of Davenports who bore themselves proudly through seven centuries of English history.

Some of the English Davenports were given royal recognition for honorable service to king and country. Vivian de Davenport, (1209-1226), was awarded the Rights of Sergeantry over the vast forests of Leek and Macclesfield in the County of Cheshire, to rid them of wolves and robbers. This Right, which remained with Vivian's descendants for many years, inspired the Davenport coat-of-arms. In it the crest appears sometimes as a wolf's head, sometimes as a felon's with a rope about the neck. The latter does not indicate that the Davenport who first bore this crest was executed, but that he had authority to execute others.

All the Davenports who came to America claim the same coat-of-arms, some using the wolf's head crest, others the felon's. The silver tankard which the Rev. John Davenport brought with him when he came to Salem, Massachusetts "in the good ship Heron" in 1637, and which is now in the possession of the New Haven Historical Society, bears the wolf's head crest.

Records and tombs of early Davenports are found in the villages of Cheshire, England, and the name is still common there. Several in each generation entered the Church. There was a Reverend William Davenport and a Reverend Walter Davenport, besides others of other given names. The family has always shown a predilection for the Christian names of William, Thomas, Richard and John. A Sir John Davenport built and endowed a chantry at Merton. A subsequent John took his degree at Magdalen College and had an honorable career in the Church. A later John was graduated from the same college, entered the Congregational ministry, migrated to the New World (1637) and became one of the most influential divines in all the early history of New England. The Abraham Davenport who, as a member of the Connecticut Legislature, gained fame by calling for lights that the Assembly might continue its deliberations on that famous "Dark Day" which many believed to be the beginning of the Last Judgment, is typical of the imperturbability of this family. Abraham married a niece of the illustrious Dr. Jonathan Edwards.

Careful research reveals no basis for the belief that the subject of this record, THOMAS DAVENPORT, born 1682, died 1759, pioneer settler on Water Lot No. 2 of the Philipse Upper or Highland Patent, was descended from or related, except possibly distantly, to the Reverend John Davenport who came to Salem in 1637, and in the Spring of the following year led a colony of settlers to Quinnipiac, there founding the town of New Haven, Connecticut.

Before the year 1676, five heads of Davenport families had settled within the present limits of Boston: Francis, Humphrey, the Reverend John, Captain Richard, and Thomas Davenport. Though no evidence of relationship between them has been found, yet they all, or their descendants, used as their seal the same arms as did the Reverend John Davenport, founder of New Haven, Connecticut.

An account of Henry Davenport, Esq., of some of the descendants of Captain Richard Davenport, may be found in the volume of the Register for 1850; in Metchell's "History of Bridgewater"; Ward's "History of Shrewsbury"; Upham's "History of the Salem Witchcraft"; Washburn's "History of Massachusetts"; and, in the "History of Sutton, Massachusetts".

Richard Davenport of Bray, Berks, came to Salem, Massachusetts, and was there from 1634 until about 1643, when he removed to Boston. He was age 58 in 1664, therefore was born about 1606. After removing to Boston, he was third in command at the fort on Castle Island, Boston Harbor, and was killed there in July 1665 by a bolt of lightning.

His wife's name was Elizabeth, surname not given. It is probable that she was Elizabeth Hathorne of Bray as a letter from Robert Hathorne of that place to his brother William in Massachusetts, 1653, sends "love to my brother and sister Davenport".

Richard and Elizabeth Davenport of Salem, later of Boston, had issue:

1) Experience, bp. June 27, 1637
2) John, bp. July 19, 1641
3) Samuel, bp. May 5, 1646
4) Sarah, bp. July 30, 1649
5) William, bp. May 11, 1656

Thomas Davenport of Dorchester, Massachusetts, is known to have been there from May 18, 1642. He was a soldier of the Colony in King Philip's War. By his wife Mary, surname not known, he had issue:

1) Sarah, bp. Oct. 28, 1643
2) Thomas, bp. Jan. 2, 1645; killed 1675
3) Mary, bp. Nov. 21, 1648
4) Anna, bp. Oct. 29, 1650
5) Charles, bp. Sept. 7, 1652
6) Abigail, bp. May 8, 1655
7) Mehitabel, bp. Dec. 14, 1656
8) Jonathan, bp. -------, 1659
9) Ebenezer, bp. -------, 1661
10) John, bp. -------, 1664

Charles Davenport, fifth child of Thomas and Mary Davenport of Dorchester, Massachusetts, was the ancestor of the inventor, Thomas Davenport of Brandon, Vermont, whose invention of the electric telegraph preceded that of Samuel Morse by a few months. He is known in Vermont history as "the Brandon Blacksmith".

For references to Humphrey Davenport, see Goodwin's "Genealogical Notes" and "The History of Coventry, Connecticut"; "The Davenport Family" in Bolton's "History of Westchester County, New York"; Onderdonk's "History of Long Island"; and Whitehead's "History of New Jersey".

It is known that Humphrey Davenport came to Dorchester from Barbados. His wife was Rachel, daughter of Thomas Holmes. His parentage is not known, but it is at least possible that he descended from, or was related to, Humphrey Davenport, younger son of William Davenport of Bromhall, England. This Humphrey was entered at Oxford in 1581, at which time his age was 15 years. He married Mary Sutton. He was a lawyer, was knighted, and died in 1610.

Humphrey Davenport and his wife Rachel, had a son in Barbados, whom they named Humphrey. From later records it appears that he was born there about 1660. While living at Dorchester another son, Richard, was born to Humphrey and Rachel Davenport. Later they removed to Hartford, Connecticut, where a son, William, was born. This William Davenport was left by his father in the care of Captain Thomas Watts at Hartford. He became a carpenter, married an Elizabeth -------, who died Feb. 19, 1697, aged 27 years. William Davenport witnessed the will of Mrs. Thomas Watts. Later he removed to Coventry, Connecticut. His name and mention of his descendants are found in histories of that town.

One further reference to Rachel (Holmes) Davenport is found in Savage's "Genealogical Dictionary of New England", Vol. 2, pp. 12-14. In 1667 she was convicted of playing cards and removed to New York. In this connection it is interesting to note that William Davenport of Westchester (of whom see later) named his daughter "Rachel".

Returning to Humphrey, son of Humphrey and Rachel (Holmes) Davenport, born at Barbados about 1660, he was known to be in Ulster County, New York, where he was appointed Clerk of the County, Dec. 13, 1690. He married Anna Rosecrans, born in the Esopus, both residing in Kingston, New York. First publication of banns, Apr. 18, 1684. Date of marriage not given (Hoes "Marriage and Baptismal Records of the Dutch Church, Kingston" #68).

Humphrey and Ann (Rosecrans) Davenport had issue:

1) Rachel (died young)
2) Nathaniel
3) Elizabeth
4) William, bp. 1694
5) Omphre
6) Sara
7) Jan
8) Rachel
9) Maria

It is possible that the Nathaniel Davenport, with wife

Margaret (Lyon) who came from New Jersey in 1791 to Tompkins County, New York, and was one of the first settlers of the future city of Ithaca, was of this line.

Of Francis Davenport, known to be in Dorchester, Massachusetts, before 1676, nothing has been established. Several Francis Davenports—one, a milliner, of Whittington, County of Darby, listed among West Jersey settlers after 1664 (N. Y. Hist. Record, Vol. 30, p. 115),—and one Francis Davenport, of Westchester, are found.

Whether, and how, any of these are related to Thomas Davenport, Philipstown Pioneer, is not known.

Descendants of the Philipstown Pioneer who later settled in Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna, believed and told that there were two generations of the family in America before Thomas Davenport, of Philipstown.

The Committee charged with editing this work finding among James Nelson's papers no record that he had heard or believed this story, set to work to find, if possible, the father and the grandfather of the Pioneer.

It was relatively easy to establish the fact that his descent did not come from any of the five Davenport families which had settled at Dorchester, Massachusetts. Research in records of Westchester County discovered many mentions of a William Davenport living in Fordham Manor after 1696 and active in real estate purchases and sales in Westchester from 1680.

Westchester records reveal that as early as 1680, William Davenport was acquiring and selling land in that county. (N.Y. Hist. Records, Vol 45, p. 108) . . . "William Davenport sells to Capt. Richard Pontin, both of Westchester, a home lot which John Hitchcock bought of Richard Farrington . . . William Davenport sells John Jennings, both of Westchester, a home lot of 2½ acres, bounded by home lot of Thomas Farrington on N.W.: on N.E. by highway, abutting against lot of Joseph Hunt; on S.E. by highway and Capt. Richard Pontin: so by a Swamp. Signed by William and Mary Davenport. Witness: Thomas Farrington. (Ibid. p. 109). At a Town Meeting held at Rye, May 3, 1686, William Davenport drew 6 acres of land." Other transactions include "the sale by Josiah Hunt and his wife, Martha, living near the saw-mill at Bronksis River, of 3 acres of Meadow on the east side of the river to William Davenport, near the dwelling of Davenport." (Aug. 31, 1686)

From the same Record we learn that "John Winter and Posthumy, his wife, of Westchester, sell to William Davenport 100 acres of land near the saw-mill on the west side of (Bronx) River, Jan. 19, 1692." (Ibid. p. 207) "John Winter and Posthumy, his wife, sell to Thomas Basset of Milford, Connecticut, land on east side of (Bronx) River, formerly belonging to William Davenport and Edward Hayden, Sept. 8, 1694 . . . William Davenport sells to John Winter, land that I bought of his father, John Winter, dec'd. Apr. 18, 1703." (Ibid. p. 304)

At the Court of Sessions of Westchester, William Davenport and Mary, his wife, served on the Grand Jury at the trial of one John Jennings, accused of "stealing one-halfe of a four-year-old steere." (June 7, 1693)

These entries prove the existence in Westchester of a William Davenport, with wife, Mary, during the period 1680-1703.

That this William Davenport was the father of grown sons and a daughter is proved by the following entires: June 18, 1698, William Davenport in the Manor of Fordham and at West Farms, "conveyed land to my son William Davenport jr., . . . the latter to pay £10 to my daughter Rachell on her marriage . . ." (N.Y. Gen. & Bio. Record, Westchester Co. Records, Vol. 51, p. 40). Another entry (Ibid. Vol. 52, p. 71) reads: "William Davenport senior, of the Manor of Fordham, yeoman, conveyed to my son Thomas Davenport, land in Fordham, retaining use to myself and my new wife Mary. . ." From several entries it seems probable that this "new wife, Mary" was the widow of John Hitchcock with whom William Davenport had made several trades of land on both sides of "Bronksis River".

Further proof that William Davenport of Fordham had sons William and Thomas, is found in an entry, date Dec. 18, 1711, (Ibid. p. 309) "William Davenport sells to his son William, both of Fordham, land there . . ." And in the entry, date 1718, that "William Davenport jr. of West Farms and wife Martha, with Thomas Davenport, sons of William Davenport, deeded land in that township." (Ibid. Vol. 52, p. 77)

That Martha, wife of William Davenport, Jr., was Martha Leggett is proved by an entry in the will of her brother Thomas Leggett (1707). Other entries lead to the belief that about 1711, Thomas Davenport married her sister Sarah Leggett. It is family tradition that he had two wives, and that the first was the mother of five children. Mr. Nelson believed that the Pioneer came to the Highlands with his first wife, but further research tends to disprove this.

The name of the Pioneer's second wife was Elizabeth, and it is believed she was a sister of Sarah, Martha, and Alice Leggett, (also of Thomas, Gabriel, William), daughters of the Mrs. Elizabeth Leggett of Fordham Manor who had extensive properties there and several slaves. This second wife Elizabeth, who survived her husband, was the mother of 7 children, a number of them minors at the date of Thomas Davenport's will, 1746.

All this sufficiently establishes that the father of the Philipstown Pioneer was William Davenport of Fordham and West Farms.

The Davenport Bible, presented to Thomas Davenport "Born ye 11th Day of April, 1750, by his Grand Father Thomas Davenport, the 25th Day of August, 1759 contains many pages of entries in faded ink and occasionally erratic spelling. From these it is established that William Davenport, Sr. of Fordham and his wife, Mary (surname not known) had children:

Thomas Davenport, born 1682, died 1759
William Davenport, born 1683, died 1735
Francis Davenport, born 1685, died 1720
Rachel Davenport———

Whether the above (4) are all the issue of William and Mary Davenport is not known. There are mentions of a Samuel Davenport living in Westchester who, in 1715, deeded a tract of 51 acres in Fordham to "his son Thomas Davenport". According to Pelletreau (Hist. of Westchester) Samuel Davenport was a wealthy farmer living in the township of North Castle in 1772. In documents of the period of the Revolution mention is made of "Davenport's" or "Danforth's" at North Castle. The last rendering of the name is common. It appears also in Erskine's Map of West Point, where it refers to the houses of the two sons of the Philipstown Pioneer.

Bolton speaks of a Richard Davenport who lived at Yorktown Heights, Westchester (near North Castle), "whose grandson Joshua is the present owner of the old home . . ."

A Richard Davenport was living in the Carolinas, Nov.

27, 1708, when he testified he was aged 66, and had owned a piece of land in 1665 (N. Car. Register).

If and how these are related to the Philipstown Pioneer is not known.

Of the four children known to be the issue of William Davenport of Westchester (above); Thomas is the Pioneer of Philipstown. His record is given in full in the pages that follow.

William, 1683-1735, who was living at Fordham, 1689, married Martha Leggett before 1707. (Will of Thomas Leggett of West Farms, dated 9/9/1707. Proved 4/13/1708.) Wills of Early Residents of Westchester Co. Liber 7, p. 488) He was living at Fordham in 1711 (see above). Later he removed to Perth Amboy, New Jersey. He had a second wife, name Bridget, surname not known. And children: Phoebe, Martha, Charity, Dorothy, Robert, Mary, Thomas, William. The last married (Jan. 1, 1762) Sarah Langworthy. (N.J. Archives, Vol. 22, 1st Series)

Francis Davenport married Martha Newberry. He lived in the vicinity of Rye and Mamaroneck. A grandson, Newberry Davenport, born 1747, married in 1774, Elizabeth Hewlett. He bought 200 acres at New Rochelle in 1786. (Bolton)

A spit of land running into Long Island Sound near New Rochelle was known to old residents as "Davenport's Neck." There is a story that one Davenport living there strongly resented the use of this name. His reason was obvious; an enormous goiter.

Bolton states that "William Davenport and his wife, Mary" came from England in 1670.

However, it is immediately apparent from birth records of William Davenport's children, in the Family Bible, that the three sons mentioned were born close together, between 1682 and 1685. One is led to believe that if William came to America in 1670, he came as a boy, and unmarried. His wife, Mary, may have come from England at or about the same time, but that William and Mary married in Westchester County about 1680 is very likely.

If William came as a boy, then he must have come with an older brother or with his parents. Who were they? From several lines of the Pioneer's descendants comes the story that their ancestor was the third generation of the family in America, and that they descended from the Rev. John Davenport, the last, we know, to be untrue. There is record (N.Y. Hist. Record, Vol. 45, p. 112) to the effect that "John Davenport and Mary, his wife, deed to John Haden of the Younghers Plantation 6 acres on Long Neck between Josiah Hunt and Miles Oakley. Also 14 acres on Long Neck formerly laid out to Richard Pontin. Also 6 acres adjoining Long Neck." The date of this transaction is Jan. 15, 1682/83. (This John Davenport was not the Rev. John of New Haven fame. Who he was is not indicated)

From the locality, from the combination of names involved in these transfers, which also occur in transfers to and from William Davenport, Sr., it is a probability that John Davenport "of Long Neck" was the father of William "of Fordham" and thus the grandsire of Thomas, the Philipstown Pioneer.

In 1715, a wealthy merchant, formerly of London, named Thomas Davenport, died in New York. It was at first believed he had died intestate, and the magistrate appointed David Jamieson and Daniel Leggett (note the latter) administrators of his estate. Soon it was learned that a will, executed in England in 1690, existed. This was proved in England and recorded in New York, 1719.

Thomas Davenport (dec'd. 1715) was unmarried. He divided his estate among his two brothers, Richard and William, and his two (or three) sisters, depending upon interpretation of the will—Elizabeth, wife of John Cortright, and Ann, the wife of Thomas Hunt,—or, Elizabeth, of the City of London; the wife of John Cortright, Ann; and, the wife of Thomas Hunt. There is no doubt that the William mentioned in this will is William Davenport, then living at Fordham, who had sons Thomas and William, living there and at West Farms.

The tradition that their family history in America began with three brothers is held by all the Davenports descended from the Philipstown Pioneer. It is probable the "Three Brothers" were Thomas, the London merchant; William of Fordham; and Richard. As Richard is mentioned in the will before William, it is supposed he was the elder.

As this Thomas Davenport (dec'd 1715) made his will in 1690, it is certain that by that time he had considerable property in England. In 1704, a Thomas Davenport was in Barbados, where he witnessed the will of one Henry Harding.

Early in the century (1702) he began paying taxes on a large tract of land on the Hudson River. It is believed this is the leasehold in the Highland Patent which Thomas Davenport, the Philipstown Pioneer (and a nephew of Thomas Davenport, the merchant) settled on before 1732. The fact that the Patent belonged to Adolphus Philipse, and that the Philipse family had sugar plantations in Barbados, and traded between the islands, New York, and London, has given rise to a belief that this Thomas Davenport had business connections with the Philipses.

It appears unlikely that he accompanied his brothers Richard and William and their sisters when these came to America in 1670. He may have been at college or apprenticed in England at that time.

From all the above, we have drawn up the following family chart. The first generation is a supposition. The two following it are established as fact.

John Davenport and wife Mary came to America in 1670, with four children, leaving their eldest son in England. They settled on Long Neck, near New Rochelle, Westchester Co., New York

2. Thomas Davenport

Thomas Davenport, referred to hereinafter as the Pioneer, was born 1682 and died Dec. 30, 1759. At a date (unknown) between 1714 and 1732, he located in the South Precinct of Dutchess County in that part now known as Philipstown, Putnam County, New York. There he became a tenant of Adolph Philipse, and as far as is known, the first to make a permanent settlement on the water front of the Highland Patent.

The location of his house was on the slope of the present Main Street, Cold Spring, a short distance west of the Methodist Church and near the Fountain Head spring which furnished this pioneer and his family with water.

The extent of his leasehold is not known. Certainly it embraced all the land between Bull Hill and Indian Brook. Lambert's map of Water Lot #2, made in 1769, after the partition of the Patent among the grandnieces and one grandnephew of Adolph Philipse, shows the leaseholds of Thomas and William Davenport, sons of the pioneer Thomas Davenport, extending from Bull Hill to the north shore of Indian Brook.

The pioneer, THOMAS DAVENPORT, was buried in a vale, a short distance from his late home, as were members of his immediate family, in unmarked graves. Here, too, lie many of his descendants. This "God's Acre" later became the village burying ground. The Old Cold Spring Cemetery is located north of the Town Hall of Philipstown, adjoining the grounds of the Haldane Central School.

The name of THOMAS DAVENPORT first appears among the freeholders of Dutchess County in 1740. In 1745, he was appointed one of the commissioners to lay out highways in the South Precinct. He continued to serve as commissioner up to and including the year 1749, and is designated in the record as Captain Thomas Davenport. His original signature, wherein-ever seen, is always DAVENPORT, and will be so used throughout this record. Some of his descendants used the name Devenport, and this is seen in family records and on tombstones. In later times the name usually appears as Davenport.

3. THOMAS (I 1.)
Son of the Pioneer

I 1. THOMAS DAVENPORT, son of Thomas the pioneer, and his first wife, believed to have been Sarah Leggett, Davenport, born about 1716, and died after Sept. 29, 1797, the date of his will. He married before 1740, wife unknown, and she probably died before 1797, as she is not mentioned in his will. Interment, without doubt, in the Davenport burying ground, now known as the Old Cold Spring Cemetery, at Cold Spring, New York.

Mr. Davenport's leasehold, as shown by Lambert's map of Water Lot No. 2, made in 1769, and after the partition of the Highland Patent among the grandnieces and a grandnephew of Adolph Philipse who died in 1749, embraced all the land between the falls of Margaret's Brook and Indian Brook and extended on the East to Budd's line. He had occupied the land near Indian Brook, as a tenant of Adolph Philipse as early as 1740. At this time only bridle paths or trails extended through the woods to the King's Highway. He built a log house near the Indian Brook and its site, near a spring, was a matter more of convenience than of any regard for lines of communication.

This spring was the source of a small creek that meandered down to the marsh lands on the river front; and it is designated on maps of the Revolutionary period as Danford's Brook and his house is marked "Danford's" (in error for Davenport's).

In 1772, and before, some sort of a public highway existed which extended from the Post Road at Elijah's Budd's (1915, Milton Smith's) in a westerly course through the woods to Davenport's house and thence south across Indian Brook. At the top of the hill, leaving the present road (1915), it turned up into the woods, keeping a southeasterly course, passing the "Old Philipse Quarry" lying to the East on the hillside, then continued, passing the house of Justus Nelson. (This stood on the land occupied (1953) by Lawrence Mead). Thence it passed along the present Avery Road to meet the old Ferry Road, which follows the course of Philipse Brook down Snake Hill.

At a -------- town meeting held in Philipse Precinct, Mr. Davenport was elected Pathmaster for the above road, in April 1772, and appears on record as follows:

> "Thomas Devenport Highwaymaster from Caleb Nelson's to his own house & from thence thro the woods to the Post Road near Elijah Buds".

This latter "road through the woods" passed through

Thomas Davenport's leasehold and a portion of land along it he bequeathed (1797) to his grandson, Beverly Warren. It was known and marked for many years as the "Beverly Warren Road". During the Revolution, troops of the Connecticut Line camped along it. (See N.Y. State marker on Route 9D)

Thomas Davenport's name appears on the list of Heads of Families in Philipstown in 1790. At this time he owned 4 slaves, more than any other resident of the township at the time. The Census for Philipstown in 1800, three years after Thomas Davenport's death, lists his sons William (with 2 slaves) and Isaac, between whom he divided his leasehold in his will.

Thomas Davenport was active in the parish of St. Peter's on the Manor of Cortlandt, and later in St. Philip's Chapel in Philipstown. In March, 1770, the following "loving subjects": Beverly Robinson, Charles Moore, Jeremiah Drake, Caleb Ward, John Johnson, Joshua Nelson, Thomas Davenport and Henry Purdy, petitioned George III for a Royal Charter for the little church (St. Peter's) which they had just erected.

Mr. Davenport executed his will, dated Sept. 29, 1797 and proved ------. Recorded in the Dutchess County Surrogate's Office at Poughkeepsie, New York, in Liber B, pp. 91 & 92; of which the following is a slightly abridged copy.

> In the name of God, Amen: I, Thomas Davenport, of Dutchess County, in Philipstown, State of New York; being weak in body but of sound and perfect mind,-------
> Item: After my just debts are paid; I order my wearing apparel to be divided between my four sons.
>
> Item: I give to my son, Robert Davenport, Five pounds.
>
> Item: I give to my son, John Davenport, Five pounds.
> Item: I give to my two sons, Isaac and William Davenport, all my improvements; excepting a part hereafter mentioned. It is my desire that William Davenport, have the South of the said farm, where the buildings and orchard is; and my son, Isaac, to have the North end of said farm to be left to the discretion of my executors, to make the division between them and it is my will, that each of them should have an equal part, according to the value of said improvements; and that they take all my movable estate, excepting what shall be hereafter disposed of agreeable to this my will; and to lay out the legacies to each one, as shall be directed; and, I do hereby order that they pay to my grandson,

ITEM: Thomas Peneon, the son of Sarah, the sum of Fifty pounds

ITEM: I give to my son (in-law), David Peneon, enough of my estate, to pay a note given to my son, Isaac Davenport, which Gilbert Budd stands penalty for.

ITEM: I give to my beloved daughter, Anna, the sum of One Hundred pounds, to be paid her out of my estate.

ITEM: I give to the heirs of my daughter, Elizabeth Mekeel, the sum of Five pounds, to be equally divided amongst them.

ITEM: I give to my grandson, Beverly Warren, the improvements he now liveth on; Beginning at the South corner of low field by the road and running a straight line to the South corner of Cat Hill field; from thence on the same line to John Warren's line, from thence, along said line to Peter Budd's line; thence along the road, to the place of beginning.

ITEM: I give to the heirs of my daughter, Mathew (Martha) Davenport, the sum of Fifty pounds, as a legacy to them. And, it is my will that my Negro by the name of Dob shall be given free after my decease. And it is my desire that, all my Bonds, Notes and Book debts, with all moneys that shall be found, be equally divided between my two sons, Isaac and William Davenport.

Thomas Davenport, L.S.

Executors: Gilbert Budd, Joshua Mead and Justus Nelson.

Witnesses: Gilbert Budd, Thomas Sailes (Searles) and Timothy Schot.

After 1802, when Captain Frederick Philipse repossessed Water Lot. No. 2 and William Davenport moved to Albany County, the property was sold to a man named Wheelock, who in turn sold 355 acres to John Lee and Alfred Eugene Watson, brothers, who in 1830 opened here the Highland School for Boys. In 1834, the school had 25 boarders and 4 masters. The following year John Lee Watson decided to enter the ministry, the school closed and the property was purchased by Henry Casimer de Rham of New York. The de Rham family made it their home for more than one hundred years.

Background of the Mekeel Family

The Mekeel family came originally, by way of Holland, from Flanders. During the religious wars, about 1630, Sebastian called "van Kortryk" from his native village, emigrated to Holland. He took with him a wife and several children, including a son named Jan.

In Holland another son was born and was baptized Michael. In accordance with Dutch custom at the time, the child was known as Michael Bastiensen, "son of Bastien", the reference to Kortryk being omitted. Michael was born at Leuvdam, but when grown, removed to a village within two miles of Schoonrevoord in the Prince's Land. He married, begot four children: Ryer, b. 1653; Metje, b. 1655; Annetje, b. 1658; Bastien, b. 1662.

On April 16, 1663, Michael, with his brother Jan, sailed to New Netherland from Amsterdam in the Spotted Cow. In 1665, in New York, a fifth child was born to Michael Bastiensen, and christened Alfie.

In the records of New York and of the Manor of Fordham, where the family settled later, the children of Michael Bastiensen were known by the surname of Michaels.

Of Michael Bastiensen's children: Metje married Hendrick Kriesen; Annetje married John Odell; Alfie married Jaques Tourneu. Nothing is known of Bastien.

Ryer Michaels was ten when he arrived in the New World. His youth was spent at Fordham, Westchester County. It is a matter of record that his father leased, Aug. 31, 1668, a piece of land in that Manor for a term of 5 years from John Archer. In 1686, Ryer Michaels married Jacomia Tibout, daughter of Jan Tibout of a well known family. They continued to live in the town of Fordham, where all their eight (8) children were born. Ryer Michaels died in 1733, aged 80 years.

Children of Ryer and Jacomia (Tibout) Michaels:

1) Michael Ryersen
2) Ryer Ryersen
3) Hendrick Ryersen
4) Teunis Ryersen
5) Hannah Ryersen, m. Leonard Vincent
6) Mary Ryersen, m. Benjamin Haviland
7) Sarah Ryersen, m. Joseph Haviland
8) Jane Ryersen, m. Benjamin Corsa

Michael Ryersen, eldest son of Ryer and Jacomia (Tibout) Michaels, had a large family. Three of his sons—Michael, John and Ryer—used the surname Michaels which they began spelling "Mekeel", or occasionally "McKeel". His other sons continued to use the name Ryersen.

It is a tradition in the family that John and Ryer Mekeel settled in Philipstown, though no record of either is found in that township. It is probable they lived in Yorktown, in the Cortlandt Manor.

Michael Mekeel, born about 1719, lived to the great age of 104, dying at Yorktown, Westchester Co., in 1823. He married Judith—(surname not known). She is interred in the Old Dutch Burying Ground of Sleepy Hollow, Tarrytown, N.Y. The record reads: Died July 29, 1795.

Michael Mekeel had settled at Yorktown in or before 1760. He owned considerable property north and west of the present McKeel Avenue, including a large part of the present Wilson Park. He sold a large tract to his son-in-law, Caleb Wildey, which was later acquired by Wildey's son-in-law, Captain Jacob Storm.

In 1760, Michael Mekeel was commissioned 2nd Lieut. of Militia by Governor Tryon. The document is still in existence. In it the name is spelled "McKeel".

Michael's son, Uriah, married Elizabeth Davenport in 1763.

II 2. Elizabeth Davenport, born in Philipstown, N.Y., about 1744; married 1763 Uriah Mekeel, son of Michael and Milche Mekeel of Yorktown, Westchester Co., N.Y. He probably located in Philipse Precinct at the time of his marriage and occupied a portion of his father-in-law's leasehold on the ridge reached by the "road through the woods", of which Elizabeth's father was Highway Master, and extending to the present Lane Gate Road. An old house on the east side of the small lake was known as "the Mekeel house" for many years. Families of Mekeels lived about this vicinity throughout the 19th Century. One had a blacksmith shop on the crossing of the Carmel-Cold Spring Turnpike and the Post Road (Junction of Route 9 and 301). This crossroad, originally known as "Budd's Corners", later as "Griffin's Corners" became "Mekeel's Corners" until the Post Road was widened for traffic about 1915. Then the remains of the smithy and house on the bank above it were torn down.

After the death of Mr. Thomas Davenport in 1797, the portion of the farm fell to the lot of his son Isaac, and the Mekeels continued to live there. In or after 1800, all the large leaseholds were extinguished by Capt. Frederick Philipse and Water Lot No. 2 was surveyed and divided up into small farms and leaseholds, and the land where Mr. Mekeel had so long made his home became known, in 1802, as Farm No. 40, containing 80 acres, and he continued to reside there as a tenant of Capt. Philipse. Here his family were all born, and here he and his wife passed the evening of life, and sleep in the Davenport burying ground in unknown and unmarked graves. No full record of their children has come to light, but the names of his children as given seem to be well supported individual records and susceptible of truth.

Mr. Davenport lived for a time on Constitution Island*, Hudson River, where at least two of his children were born. He moved to the Highlands about mid-way between Griffin's and Davenport's Corners (Route 9 at 301 and North Highlands Church) on the Albany Post Road. The house in which he lived stood on the east side of the highway and was demolished when the place later came into the possession of Thomas Jaycox, who built a house on the opposite side of the highway. Mr. Davenport moved from there to the Seymour Birdsall farm on the Cold Spring Road, south from the Highlands Church, and later to the Village of Cold Spring. (Sec. III, Frances Mekeel III 7, Thomas IV 1)

Constitution Island*

The Hudson River contains few islands and of these, Constitution Island is the most famous historically . . . situated . . . directly opposite West Point. Martelaer's Rock is the early name of it—taken from the Dutch "Martelaer's Rach" which interpreted is "Martyr's Reach", the name alluding to the labor required on this "reach" of river to combat the tides and wind at this rocky point. The name Constitution Island comes from one of the forts built there in 1775 . . . (and) must refer to the British Constitution.

Washington is first mentioned in any act or resolution of Congress in May 1775 as a member of a committee appointed to investigate possible sites for defense of the Hudson River. This island was selected as the point of greatest importance strategically and in August 1775, the first fortifications of the Highlands were started here . . . Washington drilled soldiers in the "Central Valley" of the island and it was commonly called "Washington's Parade Ground." . . . It has been said that Washington's services to his country during the Revolutionary War began and ended with "Constitution Island" for it was here that he mustered out his bodyguard in 1783. . . .

A section of the old building on the island became part of the present house there which Henry Warner built after he purchased the island from Samuel Gouvernier in November 1836. This was the first time the property left the Philipse family from the time it was given as part of the 5000-acre grant made by the Crown. Several additions were added and the name "Wood Crag" given to it. It was here that the Misses Susan and Anna Warner lived lives of great influence. Susan was the author of "The Wide, Wide World" published in 1850 and was a best seller, second only to "Uncle Tom's Cabin." She was the author of many books, among them "Queechy" and "The Hills of the Statemuc" an old Indian name for the Hudson. Miss Anna also wrote considerably. "Gardening by Myself" is one of the best known and even today still a valuable and charming book. Both sisters left a profound impression on many cadets who came to their home for weekly Bible Study. One of the world's best loved hymns, "Jesus Loves Me" was written by Miss Anna.

Through the generosity and thoughtfulness of Miss Anna Warner and Mrs. Russell Sage, to save the island from commercial buyers, the island was given to the United States in September 1908 as a part of the West Point Reservation.

. . . The old house with its priceless furnishings and museum —the charming gardens—the walks to the forts and redoubts—the points of vantage to view the scenery—make this place a spot to linger long in memory.

After their parents' deaths, and for many years, the unmarried sisters, Martha and Elizabeth, ran a successful boarding-house at 321 West 22nd Street, New York. Its reputation for propriety and excellent food led to its being popular with Hudson River families whose young daughters wished to attend schools or courses in the city. These young girls lived with Miss Martha and Miss Lib and were well looked after. Young men from Fishkill (Beacon), Cold Spring and Nelsonville, going to clerkships in New York were frequently boarders at "Three Twenty-One" as it was always called. Several romances budded here, approved by Miss Lib and Miss Martha. If they did not approve, the romance invariably withered early. Families, and more especially single ladies, from the Hudson River villages who had business in New York, felt safe if they put up at "Three Twenty-One". When Miss Alice Kelley, who was the fashionable milliner at Fishkill, or her sister Miss "Fan", who conducted a similar business at Cold Spring, made their Spring and Fall trips to New York to look at models and to buy, they made their headquarters at "Three Twenty-One".

6. John Snook Davenport, son of William and Frances (Mekeel) Davenport, born Aug. 30, 1805; drowned June 17, 1817/18

Note: In reference to the deaths of Elizabeth and John Snook Davenport, children of William Davenport, who were drowned in the Hudson River, it appears that a party representing many of the families living in the vicinity of Cold Spring had gone by sloop under Capt. Travis, to New York City and on the return trip when the passengers were quietly seated on deck and soon after passing West Point, a sudden squall struck the vessel nearly capsizing it and many of the passengers were precipitated into the water. Among those that lost their lives were members of the Davenport, Budd, and Snook families and probably others. It is said that Elizabeth, marrying against her family's wishes, was on her way to New York to purchase her trousseau and was accompanied by her younger brother on the trip.

Both buried in Hillside Cemetery near Peekskill. Mr. Horton's early education was derived from the district schools which he enlarged by two years at the University of New York. He taught school for a time and from this drifted into newspaper work and conducted for a time the Highland Democrat at Peekskill. About 1862, he purchased a small farm in Philipstown, situated on the crossroad west from Travis Corners, where he remained for two or three years, teaching school some portion of the time. Apparently in 1864, he returned to Peekskill where he began again to publish a newspaper. The West Point Foundry

Cold Spring and Nelsonville had no existence as villages until 1818 when the West Point Foundry was established. The Foundry was the most notable industrial plant ever maintained within the boundaries of Putnam County. The West Point Foundry Association was incorporated by an Act of the Legislature April 15, 1818.... From the time of its beginning the Company was under the special patronage of the government. In July 1820, the first contract was signed by Gouverneur Kemble, as president, for manufacturing thirty-two 42-pounders. In December of the same year the Board of Ordnance ordered 24 42-pounders, 36 32-pounders and many tons of shot. In addition to the cannon and shot, the Foundry produced small castings, sash weights, dumb bells, plowshares, grate and stove castings, fences, and engines for steamboats and railroads. The original DeWitt engine was built in 1831 and was one of the first railroad engines constructed in the United States. The different parts were conveyed to New York City in wagons, drawn by horses, and there put together by a mechanic in the employ of the Foundry. In 1839, the finishing, smith's and boiler branches of the establishment were moved from New York to Cold Spring. The Association built many more houses for mechanics that came from England, Scotland, and Ireland. Soon these houses were inadequate, so the proprietors of the land began to sell building lots cheaply, so many private residences were built. During the periods of greatest prosperity, the employees numbered from 800 to 1000.

In 1836, Capt. Robert Parrott, who was in the Ordnance Bureau in Washington, was assigned to duty at the West Point Foundry. The Association then under the presidency of Mr. Kemble, perceiving the ability of the young officer, offered him the position of Superintendent. This position gave him the opportunities for experimenting in his favorite fields of research and from 1836 to the Civil War these trials had been continually going on with the final result of giving to the country and to the world the famous rifled gun (Parrot Gun) and projectiles which bear his name. More than 3000 cannon and 1,600,000 projectiles were made. After the war, supplies of cannon were made for other countries. In 1897 the J. B. & J. M. Cornell Co., from New York took over the Foundry where they made 10″ disappearing coast defense guns and iron tunnel linings for the river tunnels into the city. Some years later this firm moved to Long Island City. From time to time, several small operators have occupied this site but now nothing is left but grounds, and memories of its past important position in early American industry.

John Ferguson Weir, a Director of the School of Fine Arts, Yale University, made two paintings, "The Gun Foundry" and "Forging the Shaft," depicting scenes from the casting and forging shops of the Foundry. "The Gun Foundry" hangs in Butterfield Memorial Library in Cold Spring and is one of the few paintings of Early Industrial America.

II 4. Isaac Davenport, son of Thomas (I 1), (and grandson of the Pioneer) by his wife --------, was born in the South Ward of Dutchess Co., N.Y., Mar. 28, 1748, and died there Mar. 18, 1808. He married Elizabeth Hustis who was born May 15, 1757, the daughter of David and Charity (Rogers) Hustis. She died Jan. 13, 1828. Isaac and Elizabeth (Hustis) Davenport are buried in the old Davenport burying-ground in marked graves, from which the above dates were taken.

Isaac Davenport inherited the northern portion of his father's leasehold which extended up to Margaret's Falls Brook as its northern bound. The house in which he lived until after 1790 stood within the bounds of the present Cold Spring Cemetery Association, and his son, George, occupied the house after him. Apparently, after the death of Thomas Davenport, son of William, in 1790, Isaac Davenport came into possession of the improvements of that estate, as his Will, dated in 1808, shows that in the disposition of his leasehold, it included all the lands north of Margaret's Falls Brook up to Thomas Sutton's line. The date of Isaac's removal to the old Davenport house has not appeared.

A description of this house as it was in 1819 follows: "... the old Davenport house, a frame building, a log house and the cider mill, all then on the west side of the traveled road, east three-eighths of a mile from the dock. The log house and the mill were soon after demolished, and the frame house repaired. It went into the hands of Benjamin Briggs and is now in the possession of his heirs and is known as the Briggs' house..." From Thirty Years of Early History of Cold Spring, by One Who

Has Been a Resident Since 1819. Author, Marvin Wilson, Published, Cold Spring, N.Y., Jan. 1, 1886.

After the survey in 1802 and division of Water Lot 2 into fifty farms or leaseholds, Isaac Davenport occupied farm No. 33, containing 903 acres, which was probably his original holding. He appears to be the only male descendant of the pioneer settler who held lands at that date in Water Lot 2.

Isaac Davenport served as constable of Philipse Precinct in 1772, and as assessor in 1777.

The following is a copy of the Will of Isaac Davenport, slightly abridged:

"In the name of God, Amen: I, Isaac Davenport, of the town of Philipse, County of Dutchess and State of New York, farmer. Being very sick and weak in body, but of perfect mind and memory . . .

ITEM: I give and bequeath to my dearly beloved wife, Elizabeth Davenport, the use and privilege and benefit of the farm whereon I now live and possess, until my son Benjamin arrives to the age of Twenty-one years, (except such part as shall be hereafter excepted), by her to be freely possessed and enjoyed, together with the use of the buildings and everything and profit and advantage thereon, and six good cows, one yoke of oxen, two good working horses, one breeding mare, twenty-five sheep, ten hogs, and all the farming utensils and all the household furniture, except one good bed and bedding, which I give to my daughter Nancy, and also the use of one equal half of the farm where my son George now lives, until my son Maurice comes of age. And also my said wife to have and receive yearly as much of the interest money of the money which is in the bank of the executors, as to pay the rent of what land she possesses, as long as she remains my widow, and for the use and benefit of the above mentioned and bequeathed property. She is to maintain and bring up all my children that is now under her care until they shall arrive at lawful age. And after my son Benjamin comes to the age of Twenty-one years, my wife shall have choice of the Rooms in his house, and possess and enjoy the one-third part of the above bequeathed property as long as she remains my widow.

ITEM: I give to my son John Davenport the sum of One Thousand dollars, lawful money of the State of New York, to be raised and levied out of my estate. Five hundred dollars to be paid in one year after my decease; and the other Five Hundred dollars in three years after. Also, I give to my son George, the one-half of the farm where he now lives, (that part where his buildings are) to be freely possessed by him and his heirs. Also, I give to my son Maurice Davenport the other equal half of said farm, where George lives, freely to be possessed by him and his heirs: the farm to be divided at the discretion of my executors. Also, I give to my beloved son, Elijah Davenport all and singular that certain piece or lot of land beginning at a stake and stones, at the corner of the old orchard, by a pair of bars, on the Cold Spring Landing road, thence running down the fence along said road, South Easterly, to a quarry of rocks, East of the house that William Alvin lives in, to the North end of Bluff Point, thence Northerly along the river Hudson up to Thomas Sutton's line: thence in company with said Sutton's line, Easterly to a fence of Isaac Davenport's then South easterly along said fence, so as to take in all the Landing field, to the place of beginning, freely to be possessed by him and his heirs everything thereon belonging, (except the house where Henry Root now lives, and a small garden spot round it).

ITEM: I also order that my son Elijah pay unto my executors, out of the above bequeathed property, the sum of Five Hundred dollars, in three years after my decease.

ITEM: I also give unto my son Benjamin Davenport, all and singular, the farm or lot which I now live on, and possess together with all the improvements, profits and advantages, and appurtances thereon and thereunto belonging, (Except what is given to my son Elijah, and the privilege given to my wife).

ITEM: I likewise give unto my two sons George and Maurice the Cornwall lot of Marsh meadow belonging to the farm, to be equally divided, and I also give to my son Benjamin the marsh, known by the name of the Wiltsee lot, and the Marsh belonging to his tenant farm or lot.

The fish net to be reserved for the use of my wife and family.

I also give to my son Benjamin, my old gun and my Gold watch, to be in care of his mother, until he is capable of using them. And I give to my son Maurice, my large dun horse. And furthermore: all the rest, remainder and residue of my property and estate, of what kind and nature soever, either Bonds, notes, and Book debts, goods or chattels and whatever else, to be equally divided among my five daughters, Viz: Frances Nelson, Nancy Davenport, Elizabeth, Rachel and Esther Davenport. The money in the Bank at New York to remain there until my son Benjamin comes of age.

And lastly, I constitute and ordain John Warren and Elijah Davenport, my son, sole executors of this, my last Will and Testament.

Isaac Davenport and his wife Elizabeth (Hustis) Davenport had 10 children, all born in Philipstown, N.Y.

III 1. John Davenport, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Hustis) Davenport, born Jan. 25, 1779; died Philipstown, July 27, 1842; married (1) Mary Snook who was born Aug. 20, 1779, and died May 7, 1817. Her parentage not found. He married (2) Mrs. Mary Haight, widow of Joshua Haight, and daughter of John and Sarah (Nelson) Warren. She was born Feb. 4, 1786, and died Oct. 23, 1834. Mr. Davenport had a third wife who survived him, Mrs. Mary Weeks, widow of John Weeks. Her maiden name was Lobdell, a sister to Ebenezer, of the North Highlands. She was probably born in Westchester County. She died at the home of her daughter by her first husband, John White, in Western New York. No children by her third husband, John Davenport. He and two of his wives are buried in the Old Cold Spring Cemetery.

Mr. Davenport succeeded Gilbert Budd in the hotel business on the Old Post Road at Mekeel's Corners, in Philipstown. (Crossing of Routes 9 and 301). He later removed to the next corner above (north) on the same road, and the locality became known at Davenport's Corners. He conducted there a grocery and tavern and continued the business up to the time of his death in 1842.

"... Captain John Davenport who occupied most of the land about Cold Spring, together with the Plumbush land as a farm, was considered one of the most prominent men, like Capt. John Warren and David Knapp, that was then (1819) in this part of Philipstown, and as will appear, John Davenport having had what little facilities for schooling his father could then give him, with good natural abilities, but nearly destitute of learning, John had grown up and taken the old place at Griffin's Corners (Mekeel's Corners) and kept a hotel there, and had use for keeping books. He had a customer by the name of David Henyan. Captain John could not spell, yet had some knowledge of writing and could write some of the letters of the alphabet. His book read after this sort: D. for David; H. for Henyan; B. for bushel; C. for corn.... The state of education in 1819 was very limited in this part of Philipstown and Cold Spring. Master Bowne, as he was called, grandfather of George and Martin, gave nearly all the teaching (Thirty Years of Early History of Cold Spring, by Marvin Wilson, 1886)

The names of John Davenport's 12 children, all born in Philipstown, are given below, not in order of birth: (Davenport)

He married in Philipstown, Mahala Cronk, daughter of Isaac and Martha (Rhodes) Cronk, born about 1783, died at Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 26, 1850, and is buried there. George Davenport, before 1808, occupied a farm that constituted a portion of his father's leasehold, having for its northern bound Margaret's Falls Brook. He inherited by Will in 1808 one-half interest in the improvements of this farm—that part on which his buildings were then situated, and upon lands now incorporated in the Cold Spring Cemetery. In the organization of School District No. 4 of Philipstown (1817) the lands of George Davenport were included in the said district, which also included the hamlet of Cold Spring. (Philipstown Records). George Davenport continued to live upon this land until his death. It then reverted apparently to the Philipse family, as did most of the land on the river front. She died at Cold Spring, Dec. 9, 1839 and is buried in St. Philip's Churchyard at Garrison, N.Y., while he slumbers with his kindred in the Old Cold Spring Cemetery. Elijah Davenport inherited by Will (1808) all the improvements and benefits of that part of his father's leasehold from Bluff Point, north along the River to Thomas Sutton's line, which constituted all the water front of the present Village of Cold Spring, and a portion of the village. From tradition and other sources, it appears that Elijah Davenport, previous to this, had made improvements on the water front, having built a store, which he opened for business Jan. 1, 1805 (Allis) and constructed a dock at the head of the cove about where the N. Y. Central and Hudson River R. R. now crosses Main Street, Cold Spring. He later built a dwelling house, to which he took his bride in 1810. In later years this house was owned and occupied by Peter McGurk. About 1876, it was totally destroyed by fire. Elijah prospered in his business and this prosperity gave rise to the story that he had discovered a cache of gold, buried by Captain Kidd, and had built his store directly over it in order to excavate at leisure and unseen. (See Section V). Two men from a sloop told of having seen a light in the store late at night. They put off in a small boat, landed and peered in at the store's cellar window where the light was. They said they saw Elijah Davenport digging gold coins from the earth. Whether the real source of his prosperity was hidden treasure or the rapidly increasing river traffic, as Elijah Davenport became the master of a sloop, the Mary Ann. Later, three of his sons, Cornelius, Sylvanus and Frederick, were shipmasters on the River. Elijah Davenport did not long remain in peaceful possession of his riverfront property. Whatever rights he may have had were extinguished by Capt. Frederick Philipse before 1817. After this, there seems to be no indication that Elijah Davenport took any prominent part in the affairs of the village. For many years, this dock and the locality around it was known, and marked on Hudson River charts, as Davenport's Landing.

(Sec. VII) Elisha and Frances (Davenport) Nelson are buried in the Old Cold Spring Cemetery. Elisha Nelson grew up to manhood upon the Nelson leasehold, at what is now known as Garrison, Philipstown, N.Y. At his marriage (1804), he became a tenant or helpmate on the extensive leasehold of his father-in-law, Isaac Davenport. After the death of Isaac Davenport (1808), when all the rights and improvements of his estate passed to (Captain) Frederick Philipse, Elisha Nelson became a tenant farmer of the Philipse (Gouveneur) family. His farm is said to have embraced all the land in the immediate vicinity of the present Village of Nelsonville, N.Y. Later, he purchased several building lots on the present Main Street (Nelsonville) and cornered on Spring Street directly opposite the blacksmith shop of H. D. Champlin & Son. On this corner he built his home and he continued to live there up to his death (1852). Here he engaged in the manufacture of soap and candles, and also conducted a marble yard.

"Elisha Nelson, or Uncle Elisha as he was called, was impressed with the idea that he could find Capt. Kidd's treasure that was so much talked about (See Section V). He would dream and dream again, and so sure of finding the treasure that he made several attempts secretly to find it. Finally he openly engaged George Barton, an expert at digging and handling rocks, to superintend the excavating and removing the rocks in different places of the town where Nelson had an idea the treasure was buried, but all to no purpose, for the treasure was not found. The delusion continued to be impressed on his mind up to the days of his old age that he was sure of finding it . . ." Warren Cornelius Nelson prepared himself for the ministry and in 1836 was admitted on trial into the Philadelphia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the same year was received into the New Jersey Conference. In that State, he spent the active part of his ministerial life. He was an earnest, practical and successful worker in the vineyard of the Lord, always exhibiting a devotional spirit, and maintaining an unblemished Christian character. In 1852, failing health compelled his retirement from active service. In the genial, sunny clime of Virginia he sought to retrieve his declining health, and to that end, removed with his family to the vicinity of Petersburg where he purchased a small estate and settled down for rest and solitude. Soon the storm of the great Rebellion cast its shadows about them, and soon the clash of contending armies drove them from their Eden to the city of Petersburg for protection. Here, Rev. Warren Cornelius Nelson lived throughout the war, surrounded by the spirit of rebellion, he never lost his love for the Union and the Old Flag.

V 5. William Ezra Nelson, son of Warren Cornelius and Mary (Welsh) Nelson, born at May's Landing, N.J., Aug. 11, 1848; died at Cold Spring, N.Y., Feb. 2, 1891; married June 14, 1878, by the Rev. R. M. Roberts, Anna Haight, born in Philipstown, N.Y., May 7, 1852, daughter of David and Charlotte (Arvis) Haight of the North Highlands, Philipstown; died at Havelock, Neb., Feb. 22, 1915, while visiting her daughter Mrs. William O. Forman. Interment beside her husband in Cold Spring Cemetery. At the opening of the Civil War, William Nelson was living with his parents on their farm near Petersburg, Va. When the contending armies were operating in close proximity to their home, the family sought protection within the city of Petersburg. "The hand that gives protection, claims allegiance" . . . and the lad of sixteen, whose parents were upholders of the Unoin, was conscripted into the Confederate Guard, where he did duty in and about the city. About the close of the war, Rev. Warren C. Nelson died and the family returned to the Village of Cold Spring, N.Y. Here, William Nelson for some time conducted a bakery. Later he embarked in the livery business, in which he continued up to the time of his death. His stables were behind and to the north of the Pacific Hotel at the corner of Main Street and the Waterfront. He, with Tucker Brown, Selah Post and W. A. LaDue organized the horse races which were held on the ice of the river, when this froze hard. The races were run on a half-mile track, marked with low cedar trees, on the south cove, between the village dock and Constitution Island. The horses were not faster than 3-minutes, but the sport always drew a crowd, on skates, and the contention for honors, and the prizes of a blanket or a whip, was keen. William Ezra Nelson was several times Under Sheriff, and at the time of his death was serving his third term as Sheriff of Putnam Co., N.Y. He was a member of the Masonic Fraternity, and of the Old Homestead Club of Cold Spring. William Ezra and Anna (Haight) Nelson had 2 children.

VII 1. Helen Lois, born at the old David Haight farm, the home of her grandmother, in the North Highlands, Philipstown, N.Y., Sept. 24, 1914

On Easter Sunday, 18--, Helen Estelle Nelson and a friend of the same age, Elizabeth Bailey, both of Cold Spring, went for a walk up Bull Hill for wild flowers. They climbed as high as Table Rock. While resting there and enjoying the view of the river and hills, Helen Nelson ventured too near the edge of the flat rock, slipped over the edge and fell far down the face of the mountain. Elizabeth could just see her caught in a tree, far below her, and quite inaccessible.

Elizabeth had to find and make a path down the south side of Bull Hill and so around to the base of the cliff where Helen hung. She ran to the house of Mrs. William Henry Haldane, crying for help. Mr. and Mrs. Haldane were not at home and the servants thought the child was playing a hoax and paid no attention to her pleas. She then ran across the fields of Undercliff Park to the house of Dr. George Murdock to whom she told her story.

A rescue party was organized under the leadership of Dr. Murdock's young assistant, Dr. Richard Giles. He with Daniel McCarty and another man, carrying a shutter from the Haldane house, and with Elizabeth Bailey as guide made their way up the face of the mountain to where Helen Nelson's body was. She was alive, though much bruised. They brought her down bound to the shutter and home to the Nelson house on Fair Street. That she lived and was a whole and well woman was long talked of in Cold Spring as a "miracle." Much of the miracle was due to the courage and intelligence of little Elizabeth Bailey, daughter of James Bailey, and later wife of Leslie Squire, a descendant of Thomas the pioneer through the daughter of Elisha Nelson and his wife. 19, 1807; died at Nelsonville, N.Y., Mar. 29, 1834; (according to her tombstone, she was born Oct. 19, 1807) she married, Sept. 24, 1825, Elisha C. Baxter, born in Carmeltown, now Putnam Co., N.Y. about 1797, and died at Nelsonville, Aug. 3, 1878, in his 80th year, son of Thaddeus and Hannah (Cole) Baxter. Thaddeus Baxter came from Carmel to be the schoolmaster at Cold Spring, following "Master Bowne". Elisha Baxter was engaged for a short while in the ship-timber trade.

("Wood was then the only fuel used. Coal was unknown in those days, except what was brought from the Cumberland Mts. in Maryland to melt the iron at the Foundry. . . . The house being put up, a lull in building followed. In the years before 1830, some began to settle down in business. Henry Johnson, I believe a ship carpenter from the East, after working a while at house building, commenced getting ship timber for the ship builders in the City of New York. He had only to go to the mountains adjacent to Cold Spring. . . . This start of Johnson took some of the young men of Cold Spring and vicinity to enlist under him in traversing the mountains to get ship timber. This was seen, further on, to be a formidable business. After getting all the ship timber about the mountains here, they went to the Shawangunk Mountains. Elisha Baxter set up the business on his own account. Jesse Nelson, father of James, was the next to embark in this business. The two Baxters and Nelson, who had been with Johnson, took each a corps of men, and from them came the knowledge of getting ship timber, which subsequently became a very large business. They went to Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, and at least one hundred men (from Philipstown) went to those states every winter for several years. It was very profitable, but some would meet with loss occasionally by putting some of their sales in bad hands. . . . The writer was a martyr to one of that class . . ." Early History of Cold Spring and Vicinity. Marvin Wilson, 1886)

Elisha Baxter opened the first store in Nelsonville, and later built a store at the corner of Division Street (and Main), and a dwelling house, a little below, on the opposite side of Main Street, and here he passed the active part of his life as a country merchant. At the raising of the frame of the house of Lewis Squire, Main Street, Nelsonville, Mr. Baxter made a speech and proposed the name "Nelsonville" for the little hamlet which was incorporated as a Village in 1855. The name was intended to honor Elisha Nelson, father of Elisha Baxter's first wife. Elisha Baxter married 3 times, all three are buried with him in the Old Cold Spring Cemetery.

Her parentage not recorded. It is possible she was a daughter of Daniel Ferris, Revolutionary soldier, and his wife Elizabeth Warren whose marriage is recorded. At the death of Isaac Davenport, his son Benjamin was a lad of 10 years. The great gun and the gold watch, mentioned in his father's Will, which were to be his and which were given into the keeping of his mother until such time as he was capable of using them were in existence when this genealogy was prepared (1915). The watch passed into the possession of Benjamin's son's widow living at Beacon, N.Y. The "great gun" was in the possession of the Old Homestead Club of Cold Spring, N.Y. (1915). The Will of Isaac Davenport bequeathed the homestead with all the improvements and everything thereon except certain reservations to his youngest son Benjamin. However, it is very probable that he never came into possession of the estate, Capt. Philipse cancelled the leasehold and paid for the improvements thereon. Benjamin Davenport located on the other lands of Philipse, lying south and east of Indian Brook, and remained there until about 1848, when he moved to Davenport's Corners, and there passed his days.

From the papers of Joanna Elizabeth Davenport Turner, daughter of Cyrenus and Cornelia (Lounsbery) Davenport, and granddaughter of Isaac and Rebeckah (Munson) Davenport:

"Isaac Davenport married Rebeckah Munson ------- Grandpappy and Grandmammy D. moved over to the north side of the Mountain but the children were born on the south side. Grandpappy wanted more land. He bought a couple hundred acres. They were washed by the Peters Kill on one side and by Rondout Creek on the other. He chose to build his house on the Peters Kill. It was a poor choice. The best part of the land was on the Rondout Creek. When the Delaware and Hudson Canal was put through, they dug right across the beautiful meadow near the Creek, and for this land they gave Grandpappy a new boat to be used to bring coal down to the Hudson River and so to New York. Grandpa concluded he would go on the boat himself to Honesdale for his first load of coal. He had a fine high-stepping horse to tow the boat and he set out on his new journey. In the meantime, his sister Esther had married Mr. Thomas Hunter, and was living near White Lake, Sullivan Co. When Grandpa arrived at Port Jervis, he decided to tie up his boat and go and visit his sister. While there he traded horses. His new purchase was very moderate and made a good horse to tow the boat. Arriving in Honesdale, he had the boat loaded with coal and returned down the canal until he reached his home, then he said, whoever wished to boat could have the chance. He was through. You may smile now over the thought that a canal could awake the ideas of a farming community, but it did, and many a farmer's child found the money to help him to a higher education in life. Lawyers, Doctors and steamboat captains. Aunt Esther and husband moved out to Ill.—near Peoria—their son was a "forty-niner" and went across the plains. The Davenports that I have known were no readers, did not care for civic affairs, military or political. Uncle Isaiah was different—he wanted to be intelligent and understand the higher things in life."

They left Ulster Co., N.Y. in 1835 and arrived at Augusta in 1836, passing through New York City sometime after the great fire there. They said that smoke was still rising from the embers of the city. They travelled by way of the Ohio River as their boat ticket was marked "No wood" which meant that they were first-class passengers and not required to help load the fire wood for the boilers of the boat. Before buying 640 acres of land at Augusta, Morris went as far as the town of Chicago. He could have bought land near the town but he said that the available land was too swampy. That land is now Jackson Park.

Captain Kidd's Buried Treasure

A Story Thomas Davenport (I 1.)
told his Son, John. (about 1790)

Many years ago a story was circulating among the inhabitants of New York State to the effect that Captain Kidd, the pirate who was the friend, and reputedly, a business associate of Adolph Philipse,—owner of the Highland Patent, now Putnam County,—had left buried a treasure on the Philipse lands in the Highlands of the Hudson. The story was believed by many people and some of them searched for the buried wealth.

Should anyone at the present time be hunting for the Spanish gold in the hills along the Hudson River, he may now direct his thoughts and devote his efforts to a more profitable undertaking.

Captain Kidd's treasure was found long ago by my ancestor, Thomas Davenport, who lived on the southerly part of his father's enormous leasehold, his farm running from Margaret's Brook to Indian Brook.

Thomas never hunted for the treasure. When he came upon it, entirely by chance, he did not want it—for reasons to be explained. Later, when he decided he would take it, it was gone. To understand Thomas's attitude toward the treasure, a prize sought by so many, it will be necessary to relate an experience he had a few days before he came on what he believed to be Captain Kidd's ill-gotten gains.

It all started one autumn day when Thomas was hauling firewood from a timbered hillside of his farm. While he was working another man drove into a small valley lower down and began loading his wagon with logs. Thomas did not recognize the woodsman, although he knew every man in the Precinct, and the land where this stranger was at work was part of Thomas's farm. A wave of the arm brought no answering greeting; he was completely ignored by the stranger, though he was in full view.

Disturbed by this, Thomas drove his oxen to the area where he had seen the woodsman, but as he approached the spot, the intruder vanished.

A close inspection of the ground revealed no wagon-tracks. Yet Thomas had seen a wagon. Not a bush was bent. Not a leaf on the ground disturbed. There was no indication that man or beast had occupied the area in recent weeks. Moreover, the spot where the Vanishing Woodsman had been seen was a clearing; yet Thomas had seen him loading logs.

Our ancester was now genuinely alarmed. He was a man of average intelligence, a vestryman of St. Peter's Church at Cortlandville (Van Cortlandtville), a fence-viewer in his Precinct, looked up to and respected for his sound common sense by everyone in the community. He was quite sure that he retained the normal faculties of his mind. When he observed a man, a wagon and oxen vanish into thin air, the only conclusion he could come to was that the place was haunted.

He resolved to keep away from it as much as possible.

Shortly after Thomas had seen the Vanishing Woodsman—as he called the spectre to himself—he had to go out into the woods searching for a stray calf. The trail led him in the direction of the haunted clearing. Before he reached it, climbing a steep bank, he stumbled over something protruding from the hillside. Vines had grown over it but he had disturbed these and he saw, behind them, the corner of an iron-bound chest. It looked to him like one of the heavy, oak, metal-bound chests used aboard ship of that day.

What was it doing on his farm? Who had buried it there? Most important of all, what did it contain?

Fully aware of the stories which connected his landlord Adolph Philipse with the notorious pirate hanged at Execution Dock, London, in 1701, Thomas believed that this chest had been buried there by Captain Kidd himself, or at his orders; and that it contained Blood Money. Undoubtedly, on this very ground had trod the feet of vile criminals.

The thought of these things filled Thomas's mind with dire forebodings. He had been told, and he believed, that pirate gold possessed some kind of power known as a Curse which would be visited upon anyone who disturbed the buried treasure. It occurred to him at once that a connection of some sort existed between the chest and the Vanishing Woodsman. Our ancestor fled the spot, taking one backward glance, half expecting to see a pirate rise from the ground and pursue him, armed with a dagger and waving the Jolly Roger.

During the long winter Thomas thought often of his experiences, though he resolutely made no mention of them to his wife or to his children. No need to alarm them. But times were hard, and the cost of raising a family of ten ran high. There were times when Thomas thought he would willingly risk the Curse should he find the gold.

Once, during a January thaw, he took his flint-lock gun and his dog and climbed to the spot where he had seen the chest. Snow and ice covered the ground, but he scraped this away until he saw the corner of the chest. He could not move it, and it amazed him that he had the temerity to touch an object that had such abominable connections. However, he suffered no harm from this contact, and though he and his dog searched the clearing, he saw nothing to suggest the Vanishing Woodsman. Only a few rabbits.

Shortly after this, one day, over a mug of cider at Daniel Haight's tavern, Thomas related his experiences to his best friend. I cannot tell you this man's name, because Thomas never revealed it in giving the story to his son John. But it was a friend he trusted; a neighbor.

When he told of the Vanishing Woodsman, the friend said, sharply, "Nonsense, Tom. You dreamed it." Thomas asserted that he had been fully awake and in possession of all his senses and then he went on to tell about finding the chest.

This time the friend did not say, "Nonsense," instead he asked many questions. Thomas parried these as well as he could. He gave evasive replies.

A few days later, Rev. John Doty, serving as rector of St. Peter's, rode into the Highlands to consult Vestryman Thomas Davenport about church matters. Thomas took this opportunity to tell his rector about the Vanishing Woodsman, though cautiously making no mention of the buried chest. Ministers were always hungry for funds. What, he asked, did the Rector make of the spectre.

"A mirage," said Mr. Doty firmly.

This was a word Thomas did not understand. Mr. Doty then explained that such apparitions were not uncommon; they were natural phenomena, and he, himself, had experienced them several times. What Thomas had thought was an intruder was actually an image, appearing to him as it reflected in the sky and down to a layer of moist air on the ground. Somewhere, at some unknown distance, there had been a live man loading logs; his reflection was a mirage and was no more sinister than the reflection of Thomas's own honest face in the looking-glass in the corner.

With this assurance from the clergyman Thomas knew that there was no connection between the Vanishing Woodsman and the buried chest. He discarded his belief in a curse connected with pirate gold as superstition. The gold in the chest—at least, the gold he believed was in the chest—was only gold, regardless of whose it had been, how it had been obtained, and who put it there. More, it was on his land, for which he, and his father before him, had paid taxes and rent.

Thomas's commonsense told him that the contents of the chest rightly belonged to him.

He waited for the warm days of spring to melt the snow from the forest. When the frost had come out of the ground, and the shadbush was putting out its brave delicate flowers, he took pick and spade and went up the hillside to where the chest had been seen.

The chest was gone!

A deep hole in the hillside furnished shocking evidence that someone had removed the chest, and with it, the treasure.

For many years Thomas did not mention his loss to anyone. But, in the twilight of his years, long after his friend had gone, Thomas told the story to his son John, then a grown man, married, with children of his own, and living across the River in the Shawangunk Precinct of Ulster County. In relating his experiences, he never revealed the name of his friend.

John, in time, repeated the story to his youngest son, Morris Davenport, born in the Shawangunk, but removed to Illinois in 1836. Morris retold it to his grandson George, my father, born in Illinois, but removed to Oklahoma. That is how the story came to me, a resident of California. Originating on the east bank of the Hudson, it travelled with the Davenports, to the shore of the Pacific, where I retell it to my grandsons. The story of an ancestor who found a treasure, lost it to a friend, and kept the secret because he cherished friendship more than he valued a chest of gold.

VI, Thomas II 2. Martha died in Philipstown, N.Y., Apr. 16, 1789. Thomas and Martha (Davenport) Davenport resided on the old homestead of their grandfather, Thomas the Pioneer, in the present village of Cold Spring. In 1790, after Thomas Davenport's death, this was added to the leasehold of his cousin and brother-in-law, Isaac Davenport, except that part occupied by Thomas Sutton, who had married Thomas Davenport's older sister Meribah. Both buried in Old Cold Spring Cemetery.

III 1. BEVERLY WARREN, called grandson in the will of Thomas Davenport of Philipstown, dated Sept. 29, 1797 by which he left to his grandson, the improvements of the farm he now liveth upon.

This farm was located on the cross road, leading from Davenport's house to Budds on the Post Road and was the southeasterly corner of Davenport's leasehold. In 1802, this farm was still occupied by Beverly Warren as a tenant of Capt. Philipse, and then known as farm No. 20, containing 123 acres. The record of his family as given by Emily Warren Roebling in her "Notes on the Warren Family" published in the Journal of the Rev. Silas Constant, p. 436, has been used in this record. However, we are inclined to believe that Beverly Warren's mother was the first wife of Peter Warren.

II 10. Anna Davenport, daughter of Thomas (I 1) Davenport and ----. No trace.

II 11. Frances Davenport, "a child of Thomas Davenport" (Rec. Pres. Ch. Rumbout Precinct, Dutchess Co., Vol. 68) Mar. 6, 1760—(probably baptism). Mekeel family tradition claims that John Mekeel's wife was a Frances Davenport.

It is more probable, from the Revolutionary War records of John Mekeel that he lived in the Manor of Cortlandt, Westchester Co. His will, dated Nov. 30, 1780 (Wills of Early Residents of Westchester Co., N.Y. 1664-1784, #631) calls him, John Mekeel, Manor of Cortlandt.

No will by a Mekeel, of any name, is found among the Wills of Early Residents of Philipstown, Dutchess Co., N.Y.

John Mekeel's will was witnessed by Dr. Ebenezer White, the distinguished physician and patriot of Yorktown, who had served his apprenticeship under Dr. Peter Huggeford of Cortlandt Manor. When the War broke, Dr. Huggeford, an ardent Tory, left to become surgeon of Col. Beverly Robinson's Regiment of Loyal Americans. His two sons, serving in the same regiment, were the scouts who led the British by trails around the Dunderberg to attack and capture Forts Montgomery and Clinton, (Oct. 7, 1777). Meanwhile Dr. Ebenezer White of Yorktown was as zealous in the American cause. The British tried their best ruses to capture him, to exchange for Tory Dr. Samuel Bull of Dutchess Southern Precinct, but thanks to the wariness and devotion of his patients, Dr. White eluded them. Once a squadron of horsemen surrounded his home. Warned in time, Dr. White escaped. By mistake the British took Dr. James Brewer who lived nearby. They met a party of Americans on Stony Street, and in the skirmish, Dr. Brewer was mortally wounded. He died next morning in Dr. White's arms. (Nov. 20, 1780)

John Mekeel was commissioned 1st Lieutenant, Westchester Militia, and later served as 2d Lieutenant under Col. S. Drake and Capt. H. Strang in the 3rd North Manor of Cortlandt Reg't., (June 25, 1778). Record of Feb. 27, 1779; John Mekeel, 1st Lieut.

He is said to have married Frances Davenport, daughter of Thomas Davenport, eldest son of the Philipstown Pioneer. However, no mention of her, or of children by her, appears in Thomas Davenport's will (1797), though he leaves bequests to children of his other daughters deceased.

John Mekeel's will, (Nov. 30, 1780) mentions "wife Anna", and sons Moses and William, and daughter Phoebe.

To add confusion to confusion, there exists the following letter which also illustrates the tragedy of families divided against themselves during the Revolution.

Address: To Joseph Mekeel,
at the City of Parr
at St. John's,
in Nova Scotia

New York State, Westchester County, Courtlandt's Manor

Whether this Jacob Mekeel is a son of John or Michael Mekeel is not known. It seems probable that he was of the family of the Elizabeth Mekeel who married John Davenport, and went with him to the Shawangunk before the Revolution, as the name "Jacob Mekeel" recurs through several subsequent generations of that line, and does not occur among the known descendants of other Mekeels.

This, however, is only surmise.

I 2. WILLIAM DAVENPORT, son of Thomas (the Pioneer) Davenport by his first wife (believed to have been Sarah Leggett) was born in the South Precinct of Dutchess Co., Province of New York, now Putnam Co., Aug. 23, 1718. (Genealogical Notes of James Nelson); died before Aug. 7, 1792, the date of probate of his will. Married, June 14, 1748, Sarah Sherman, who was born Feb. 14, 1731. As she was not mentioned in his will, dated Aug. 18, 1750, in which he left his children to the care of his executors, this would indicate she was then deceased. It is probable that she died soon after April 11, 1750 in the 20th year of her age.

No doubt William Davenport and his wife Sarah were buried in the Davenport burying-ground on the leasehold, in unmarked graves.

William Davenport's leasehold is shown on Lambert's map of Water Lot #2, made in 1767, having as its northern bound Bull Hill, and extending south to Margaret's Brook, thus including all the present village of Cold Spring. There is no indication that he ever had a home outside of the homestead built near the Fountain Head Spring by his father, the Pioneer. At the death of his stepmother, (sometime after 1759) he purchased the improvements and obtained a new lease, for this portion of his father's original leasehold, from the Philipse family.

He executed his will Aug. 18, 1750, four months after the birth of his twin children, Thomas and Elizabeth Davenport, and while his father, the Pioneer, was still living. At the time the will was executed, William Davenport was "sick and weak in body", and one of the three witnesses is Dr. David Stanley, an early physician of the South Precinct who, according to James Nelson, "settled on the Path". Dr. Stanley rode on horseback about the Highlands to treat his patients, carrying his pharmacopoeia in his saddlebags. It was his custom to weigh and measure out the doses in the presence of the patient and family, lest any should think he was cheating, or administering poison. This caution became proverbial in the Highlands; "as cautious as Doctor Stanley" was a local saying for a full century after the doctor's death.

The will of William Davenport, executed Aug. 18, 1750, was proved Aug. 7, 1792. (Dutchess County Wills, Liber A. Page 327). An abridgement follows:

> In the name of God: Amen, I William Davenport of (Philipse Patent, Dutchess County, N.Y.) the 18th day of August in the 34th year of our Sovereign Lord George the 2nd, A. D. 1750.
>
> I, William Davenport Esq. of the South Precinct of Dutchess County in the Province of New York, being sick and weak in body, etc.
>
> I do hereby settle bequeath and dispose of the same at public sale, viz;
> First: I hereby order and empower my executors hereafter mentioned, within convenient time after my decease, to sell in the most advantageous manner either by private sale or public vendue, as shall seem most meet, such out-door or indoor estate as shall be sufficient to pay all my just debts and funeral charges.

Item: orders debts paid: Item: after my funeral expenses and debts are satisfied, I order my executors to put out all such money as shall remain from sale of indoor and outdoor sales, until my daughter Meribah Davenport shall attain her 18th year, and the interest thereof, to be expended in the bringing up of my children.

Item: Orders executors to bring up my children in a decent and christian manner, and if the interest is not sufficient, I order my executors to use some of the principal. After my daughter Miraba is 18 years old, authorises and directs his executors to divide his estate, between his daughter Miraba, Thomas and Elizabeth: while the daughters receive one shilling, Thomas is to receive two.

William Davenport

Executors, Capt. Peter Debois, Joseph Cromwel and my loving brother Thomas Davenport, all of the precinct and County aforesaid.

Signed in the presence of Robert Davenport, David Stanly, and Elizabeth Baker. Proved the 7th day of Aug. 1792

Children: 3 (Davenport) born in Philipse Precinct, Dutchess Co., N.Y.; dates of birth (Davenport Bible)

1. Meribah (Miraba), born Apr. 14, 1749; married Thomas Sutton. Child: 1 (Sutton)

III 1. William, born ----; died ----; married

IV 1. a son, buried in Cold Spring Dec. 1836

II 2. Thomas, born Apr. 11, 1750; died July 1790; married his cousin, Martha Davenport (Sec. V, II 8) who was born in Philipse Precinct, now Philipstown, Jan. 26, 1755 and died there Apr. 16, 1789. Thomas Davenport died in the prime of life. He had been a private in the 3rd New York Regiment during the Revolution and was fond of telling his children that he had been on intimate terms with two generals commanding in the Highlands—General Heath and General Israel Putnam. Asked how this happened, privates being privates and Major Generals what they are—he would tell of being on guard one stormy night with two others at a post in the woods, and of halting at the point of a bayonet a couple of muffled-up officers who rode along the path. Though the officers announced themselves as Generals Heath and Putnam, Thomas remained unconvinced until they unwrapped themselves and produced credentials, cursing vehemently as they did so. "How much more intimate can you be with a man than to have him call you a -----, -----, --- - - --- and not knock him down?"

Thomas and his wife are buried in the Old Cold Spring Cemetery. Mr. Davenport lived probably with his father at the homestead or some nearby place. Children: 5 (Davenport) all born in Philipstown, N.Y.

III 1. William, born Dec. 5, 1775 in Philipse Precinct; died in Nelsonville, N.Y., Mar. 27, 1852; married (1) Frances Mekeel (Sec. III—Frances Mekeel III 7) and married (2) Euphemia Penny, (for record, see Sec. III) born about 1791 and died at Peekskill, N.Y. Sept. 1, 1856 aged 64 yrs. Mr. Davenport lies beside his first wife in the Old Cold Spring Cemetery, while his second wife is buried in the Cedar Street Cemetery directly across the roadway.

(From Marvin Wilson's "Early History of Cold Spring, etc. . .") "Next I will describe, as best I can, the denominations of Christians that were rising up. . . Above the boring mill connected with the Foundry was a large room used as a pattern shop. This room was cleared out and swept, and boards arranged for seats. This made a spacious hall for church or other gatherings. All denominations were invited to hold their meetings in it. There were but very few of each denomination then. The Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Baptists accepted the invitation. The Methodists chose to use a private house or the school house on the hill by Dr. Stanbrough's. (Main St., Cold Spring, just west of High Street). ... Daddy Reynolds, so-called, was the Methodist Circuit preacher. Elder Warren was the favorite with the Baptists.... About 1826, a few wise heads, after using the pattern-loft for Church purposes, conceived the idea of building a Union Church. Meetings were held and a committee appointed, composed of Gouv. Kemble on the part of the Episcopalians, William Davenport on the part of the Baptists, Elisha Nelson on the part of the Methodists, and William Young on the part of the Presbyterians. This committee went to work with a will, a site was selected, funds raised, the building commenced, and in eighteen months a famous church edifice was built of stone, with a cedar roof. It was situated on the rocks, east of the steamboat dock, a monument to the exertions of the early Christians of Cold Spring and vicinity before 1830."

JOHN NELSON, pioneer of Mamaroneck, Westchester Co., N.Y., was born probably in Norfolk County, England, and came to New Amsterdam about 1660. He first appears upon the records as plaintiff in a suit against Thomas Sprey of New Amsterdam, Jan. 17, 1670. After his marriage to Hendrica Vander Vliet, he made his home at Flatbush, Long Island, New York. Early in 1683, he removed to Mamaroneck where on July 17, 1683, he purchased land from Mr. John Richbell and Ann his wife. John Nelson's home lot adjoined the land of Robert Penoyer and is so described in a deed from himself and wife Hendrica to William Pierce, Apr. 2, 1694. John died after Mar. 28, 1713 at which time he was a witness to a deed of John Pell, Sr. An elevation a little north of the "Homestead" in Mamaroneck, known as Nelson's Hill, perpetuates the name and upon which was located the burial ground of the early generations of the family. It was historically memorable during the Revolution for the surprise and defeat of the Queens Rangers under Col. Rogers, by Col. Haslet, with his brave sons of Delaware. Hendrica Nelson's father, Dirck Jansen Vander Vliet, a soldier, emigrated from Rilevelt, Holland, to New Amsterdam in the "Spotted Cow", Apr. 15, 1660 and his wife Greetje Gerritse followed him with two children in the same ship in 1663. Children of John and Hendrica Nelson were Maria, Catharine, Mehitable, Polycarpus, Eli and Francis.

Francis Nelson, born at Mamaroneck about 1691, died probably in the Hudson Highlands, in that part now known as Garrison, Putnam Co., after Nov. 13, 1750. He married Annie ----- who died in the Highlands after Oct. 8, 1733, at which date she gave consent to the sale of lands at Scarsdale, N.Y. A strong tradition current among his descendants (was) that his wife was Mary Skinner ------ in fact the name Annie ------ was practically unknown, until brought to light by examination of the land records by Mrs. Roebling, in or about 1888. It seems very probable that Mary Skinner was his second wife, to whom he was married late in life and survived him. Francis Nelson until about May 1, 1716 resided at Mamaroneck at which date he purchased of Col. Caleb Heathcoate, lands in the Manor of Scarsdale and removed shortly thereto. On Oct. 8, 1733, he conveyed all his lands in Scarsdale to William Barker and shortly after removed to the Hudson Highlands, in Dutchess Co., now Putnam Co., N.Y., where he became a tenant of Adolph Philipse. The extent of his leasehold not determined, but its location was the same as that occupied by his son Justus as shown on a map of Water Lot. No. 2, made by Daniel Lambert, in 1769, and designated as the Nelson lot. His name first appears upon the record of Dutchess County in 1736 and among the freeholders in 1740. His name disappears from the tax list in 1747. It is believed that Francis Nelson died at the leasehold in 1750-51 and was buried on the farm. A tradition among his descendants says that the early Nelsons, Garrisons, and Coverts, and others were buried in the "Old Indian Field" near the Indian burial ground, demolished about 1890 by John M. Toucey. His 3 sons Joshua (Section VIII), Caleb, and Justus remained at the leasehold; the latter two died there. Francis Nelson had 7 sons and 7 daughters; his son John married (1) Elizabeth Davenport, (2) Rebecca Schot; his grandson was Elisha Nelson for whom Nelsonville was named. Elisha, born May 2, 1778, (also given May 26, 1777) married Frances Davenport (Sec. IV, III 5) daughter of Isaac Davenport. The following is a letter written by his granddaughter, Mary S. Merritt, (1909) "My grandfather had a sloop on the Hudson River 100 years ago. He went up and down with freight years before the railroad was built. He was going down the river the same time the 'Cleremont' was going up with Robert Fulton, the first steam boat. The men on Grandfather's boat were so frightened they put for the shore. The Cleremont burned pine wood to make steam and it made a quantity of black smoke and made so much noise the men were so frightened they thought it was the devil coming up the river. It took the sail boats two or three days to go from Cold Spring to New York. They had to go with the wind and tides. The distance from here to New York is 52 miles. There is a grand new boat—the 'Robert Fulton' on the Hudson River that is a great contrast to the one that first went up our beautiful river one hundred years ago. We can wonder what will be done the next hundred years. My grandfather's name was Elisha Nelson. He built the first home in Nelsonville". (Section IV)

Incidents Relating to the War of the Revolution

As Related By Mrs. Sarah (Nelson) Welles (III 3), Who Was Grandmother of Miss Black of Geneva, New York.

Mr. Joshua Nelson, the Father of Mrs. Welles, was a Farmer who resided on the east side of the North River, nearly opposite West Point. This house (afterward owned by Richard Upjohn) was frequented during the war by several of the principal officers of the American Army. Generals Washington, Putnam, and Greene are distinct in her recollection. Koscinsko, the Polish Chief, also was there and took her likeness with the representation of a lion over her shoulder by way of protection. Col. Robinson's House was about a mile from Mr. Nelson's, where Arnold had his headquarters. On the day previous to the capture of Major André, the British Spy, Mrs. Welles and her sisters were invited to take tea with Mrs. Arnold, who her husband said was young and felt lonesome. But the intended visit was spoiled,—Arnold, finding his plans frustrated, fled with precipitation and took refuge on the "Vulture" then in the river near Mr. Nelson's. Mrs. Welles saw Major André pass her father's house after the capture on his way to West Point.

Mrs. Welles recollects that a party of the British Army was landed near her father's house and another a short distance above. Taking different routes they came together and destroyed "Continental Village" four miles from Mr. Nelson's. Col. Robinson had command of these troops. Col. Robinson being a neighbor of Mr. Nelson's and friendly with the family had a guard stationed by his house to protect him from British Soldiers. Some Hessians coming to the house with a view to plunder were asked by the guard what their business was. When they saw they could not carry out their purpose they pretended they only wished to light their pipes. A coal was handed them in the tongs, after using these, they threw them away angrily. The barn on the farm of Col. Robinson was used as a hospital for the sick and wounded of the American Army in the summer previous to the close of the War. Dr. Henstice (Eustace) was the Chief Surgeon here. During (his) absence, Dr. Welles then Surgeons-mate, had the care of the hospital. During his residence in this neighborhood, he (Welles) made the acquaintance of Miss Sarah Nelson, an acquaintance which resulted in marriage.

The Officers of the "Vulture" came several times to Mr. Nelson to procure provisions. They are said to have behaved with decorum and civility.

Gen. Putnam with his army took Winter Quarters in the Highland Mountains, near Mr. Nelson's (the year is forgotten). The Cavalry of the Army were turned into a field of wheat belonging to Mr. Nelson and the fences on his farm were used as fuel. To remonstrances made to the soldiers they replied "that their orders were not to burn stone fences while rails could be found". At one time some officers of the American Army drove away thirteen of Mr. Nelson's cows. Mrs. Nelson went to one of the officers and seizing the reins of his bridle begged him to leave one or two for the use of the family. He replied that he could not for if any were left they would come into the possession of the British. A British recruiting officer once came to the House, pretending that he had taken orders to enlist men for the British service, with a view to effect his own escape from the Army. Thus imposing on the family, he was treated with much hospitality by them. Subsequently, his true character was revealed by his conduct, on a second visit, with a number of men whom he had enlisted for the British service. The object was not to plunder the house. Their leader on his first visit had seen several articles of silver and he expected to lay hands on them, but in this he failed, for they had been secreted by the family. They, however, made destructive work with other property. Going into the loft of the Wagon House they tumbled out a quantity of cheese which had been stored there, rolling it and breaking it on the ground with an axe. They broke in pieces a valuable chest of drawers which had been put there for safe keeping. In their search for silver they rummaged the house, emptying vessels of their contents, here a firkin of apple sauce, there a keg of flax-seed was turned upside down. They seemed possessed of a demoniac spirit in their lust of plunder. Their leader had now another officer with him, and while one was carrying away a large china bowl, a very ancient article that stood on the cupboard not in use, the other said "Pooh, let the old woman have her bowl". But Col. Robinson made these two officers atone for their wanton barbarity by taking from them their commissions. While engaged in plundering, they said they were destroying the property of rebels and that they had a right to burn the house. Mrs. Nelson resolutely replied that they had the power but not the right to distress them.

At one time there was a twenty gun ship in the river near Mr. Nelson's belonging to the British. The officers behaved civilly whenever they came to the house. Owing to its situation, the property of Mr. Nelson was plundered by the soldiers of both armies.

to me by Mrs. Wood of St. Paul, Minn., who by the marriage of an aunt was connected with the Nelson family. I have only taken from it such incidents as were connected with our old house in the Highlands.

I 4. Sarah Davenport, daughter of Thomas (the pioneer) Davenport by his first wife, (Sarah Leggett) born ----; died ----; married, 1735, Jacob Mandeville. Jacob Mandeville is spoken of by Beverly Robinson as "an old tenant under Adolphe Philipse". It is not known when he came to the Highlands from New York where he was born. (New York Dutch Church Marriages). He was baptized in New York, Jan. 10, 1711. (New York Genealogical Record, Vol. XXXVIII).

He and his wife Sarah, daughter of Thomas Davenport, lived in the house at the Four Corners, Garrison, N.Y., still standing (1962), owned by Miss Nancy Allan. This house is marked on the Villefranche and Erskine maps as "Mandeville's". There is a tradition that it was used as a hospital during the Revolution. Certainly it was visited by Washington on his visits to the defences of the Highlands. The wife of General Israel Putnam died within its walls during the attack on Fort Montgomery; she was buried in the Mandeville burial ground behind the house. Years later the body was transferred to St. Philip's churchyard. Legend says that she was buried alive—that when the coffin was opened at its removal to another spot in the cemetery, when the new church was built, it was found that the body had turned over on its face.

as vestryman of this church. Joshua Nelson came to the Hudson Highlands with his father at some date between 1733 and 1735 and lived upon the Nelson leasehold until his marriage and soon after moved to the leasehold of his father-in-law. According to a family tradition, the house in which Mr. Nelson lived before and during the Revolution, and where he died, was built and occupied by a Mr. Springsteen (or Springstead). The house (Mandeville's) is (1917) known as the Upjohn place at Garrison. On May 6, 1776, Joshua Nelson was appointed second major in a regiment of militia to be raised in Dutchess County.

In an old manuscript book which belonged to Joshua Nelson is recorded—"Jacob Mandeville deceased the 27th day of August, in the year of our Lord Jesus Christ, one thousand seven hundred and eighty four, aged 75 years."

Children of Oliver and Hannah (Seeley) Davenport: 9

II 1. Thomas Davenport, born June 4, 1749; died May 4/5, 1812; fought in the Revolution; married Feb. 22, 1774, Charity Lamoreux, born Jan. 25, 1759, daughter of John and Charity (Davenport) Lamoreux, his first cousin. (Sec. X, Charity I 7, Charity II 13) In 1787, Thomas and Charity went to Pennsylvania and his father, Oliver, went with them remaining until 1800 when he returned to Cheesecocks. In his will (1800) he left all his property, situated in Plymouth, Luzerne Co., Pa., to Thomas. Many records are there and an old "homestead" still stands. Thomas's will (1812) is at the Court House, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., along with many deeds. Descendants of Thomas and Charity Lamoreux Davenport continued to occupy a part of the original homestead farm for several generations. The four Davenport houses with their long stoops extending the length of the entire front of each, presented a unique appearance, compared with the other buildings of the pioneers. The latter followed Yankee models, built after the houses of Litchfield Co., Conn. The Davenport houses continued the traditions of the Hudson Valley. The row extended from the "Swing-gate" to the mountain road near the Nottingham colliery. The residence of the ancestor was situated about half way between the two points named.

From the death of Thomas Davenport down to the year 1820, the entire estate remained in common, notwithstanding three of the sons had residences of their own and three of the daughters were married and resided away from the paternal homestead. For eight years the Davenports labored in the same fields; fed, we may say, from the same board—as the crib and granary contained the same common stock of grain—they were in fact, a commune of their own. The whole machinery moved without a jar; there was perfect accord.

When they would meet together of an evening after the day's labor, upon the homestead stoop, it used to be the remark of the others that "Congress had assembled". Here were discussed such matters as how such a field should be tilled, what should be the type of the succeeding day's employment, which of them should swing the cradle, and which rake and bind, how much of the crop should be threshed and sent to Easton, and how much put into bins for the year's supply. In this way the Davenport congress managed the family's affairs. The six sons of Thomas and Charity Lamoreux Davenport were all farmers. Daniel and the Goulds became interested in the coal trade when coal was discovered along the Susquehanna River. Samuel opened a store which prospered. He and Ira Davenport were leading merchants of Plymouth from 1835 to 1875.

BUREAU OF PENSIONS

Washington

December 15, 1926

"----- I have to advise you from the papers in the Revolutionary War pension claim S. 8325, it appears that Robert Davenport or Devenport was born May 10, 1757 at Monroe, Orange County, New York.

While residing at said Monroe, he enlisted in October 1775 and served five months as a private in Captain Samuel Raymond's Company, Colonel Isaac Nicoll's New York Regiment.

He enlisted in March 1776 and served at various times in the New York Troops under Captains Francis Smith, Jonathan Tuthill, Pierson, and Colonels Woodhull and McClaughrey until October 6, 1777, when he was wounded in the right arm, while defending Fort Clinton.

In December 1777, he served eighteen days in Captain Smith's Company.

In 1778, he moved with his father (Oliver), whose name is not stated, to Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, and he served three weeks in Captain Whittlesey's Company, Colonel Denniston's Pennsylvania Regiment, and was in the battle of Wyoming.

After this he moved back to Orange County, New York, and from September 1778 served one year as a teamster under Joseph Crooks in the Wagon Department.

After which he served at various times until the close of the war in Captain Francis Smith's Company.

He was allowed pension on his application executed September 3, 1832, while a resident of Monroe, New York.

In 1839, he was living with a son in Preble County, Ohio, name of son not stated, nor is the name of soldier's wife on record.

The above noted Robert Davenport (all spellings of that name searched) is the only soldier of that name found on the Revolutionary war records of this bureau.

Respectfully,

Children: 13 (Davenport) not in order of birth

III 1. Walter, of Monroe, N.Y.; 1836 sold share of land to John McKelvey and moved to Hadley, Mich.

III 2. Isaiah Davenport, son of Jesse and Eleanor (Slighter) Davenport, born Apr. 12, 1816 (?); died July 24, 1881; married Dec. 20, 1837, Eliza O'Neil, at the home of the bride's father William O'Neil, in Monroe, N.Y.; witnessed by Samuel Davenport (III 10). Eliza was born Nov. 1821; died June 8, 1907

Isaiah and his brother Walter came to Michigan in 1836 and bought a farm in Troy Tshp., two and one-half miles from Birmingham and about seventeen miles N.W. of Detroit. It was thought that Walter or Isaiah went back for their mother but she may have come through with some of the other children on their way to settle around Hadley and Elba in Lapeer Co. which was about thirty miles further North into wilderness country. This movement took place in 1836 and 1837. Samuel and Walter secured land in Lapeer Co. in 1836 and Robert and Oliver in 1837.

Isaiah's house in Troy was a fourteen room Greek colonial, white with green shutters and the interior was finished in black walnut, a comfortable home for their mother. Soon after they came to Michigan via the Erie Canal and Lake Erie, Isaiah went back to Orange Co., N.Y. and married Eliza O'Neil, a young woman of seventeen years, and brought her back to Michigan. She loved her mother-in-law, Eleanor, very dearly and helped care for her until her death.

The Troy home was the stopping place for all the family who came West and later on their way to and from Detroit.

After the death of Eleanor (Slighter) Davenport, Isaiah sold the Troy farm and with Eliza and their four sons homesteaded forty-acre tracts near Baldwin in Northern Michigan. They proved their claims but found the land to be inferior so they sold, returned to Troy and bought the farm back. While living in Baldwin, Oliver and Hudson built the first store in Reed City; Dewitt was school commissioner of Lake Co., and William taught school.

After Isaiah's death Oliver and William incorporated as Davenport Brothers, added more acreage and continued to farm and care for their mother. It is here that Oliver died and where William raised his family of seven children.

William sold the farm and built a home in Birmingham.

He did not retire but continued to be an active business man. His death was in 1935 at the age of 83.

In those days, to quote from the letter of a pioneer, "Detroit is a mean little city as the streets are muddy and the sidewalks bad, the clearings leading back from the river for one-fourth mile. About one-half of the houses are framed, while some are made of brick. The rest are log cabins."

In Jesse Davenport's Will, he leaves to Elizabeth, the remainder of the money coming to her from the Forrest of Dean Acres which he had obtained from Peter Lamoreux, Jr., (perhaps a mortgage or loan with Forrest of Dean land as security). Elizabeth had married John Lamoreux, son of Peter, but John must have incurred Jesse's ire as he said in his Will John was to have no part of the money. However, eventually, John did receive a share of this money. Forrest of Dean Acres was an iron mine which was camouflaged during the Revolution so that the British could not use the iron. It is now a part of the Harriman properties.

"After their marriage in Troy, they went on horseback to their new home in St. Clair, Mich. where Grandfather was working in Kitton's Foundry. After living there a few years, they bought a farm in Lapeer, Mich. where Grandfather worked in a foundry and then returned to St. Clair. Grandmother remained on the farm alone with the children. She raised sheep, carded and spun the wool for homespun to clothe the family and made their blankets. She also made her own rugs and carpets and raised geese to provide down and feathers for pillows and feather-beds. Grandmother was always studying the medicinal herbs and reading the doctor books available as she was called upon for nursing care frequently. Back in the woods on their farm, Indians lived. Everytime Grandmother baked bread, she took them a loaf. They never bothered her! One night late, a severe wind and thunder storm came up and she was awakened by a noise at the door. Trembling, she opened it, to find a big Indian standing there who said 'my women frightened, could we stay in barn til storm over'. Grandmother agreed, warning 'no fire built'. As soon as it was daylight, she hurried to the barn, but there was not an Indian to be seen. Later, she, too, returned to St. Clair and their home was across from what was then called "The Moore Salt Block" on Front Street overlooking the St. Clair River. Grandmother went to school for 3 months and her teacher was Aunt Sally Ann (III 4) who taught in an old log house. Grandfather taught her to read from the Bible, taught her to write, and her numbers."

Oliver Davenport lived on a farm the first twenty-three years of his life near Monroe in Orange Co., N.Y. About this time he married and moved to New York City where he became superintendent of a barilla factory, manufacturing barilla for soap making. At the end of ten years, in 1837, he moved to Michigan settling in the lonely wilderness of Hadley Tshp., Lapeer County, and entered 160 acres of land. Oliver with two brothers, left the remainder of the family in Troy, Mich. with his mother and brother Isaiah, and went in advance of them into the wilderness. The land on which they wished to settle lay so deep in the forest that they had to find their way to it by means of blazed trees. They cut the road through the timber for twelve miles. Two log cabins were erected, the men taking shelter under the wagon box during the progress of the work. Oliver finally had the satisfaction of seeing this land cleared, fenced, and stocked, and on it, good farm buildings. His family was the third oldest in the township.

In this new country, the children had no opportunity to attend school until about three years after their settlement there, when a log school house was built and Aunt Sally Ann (Sarah A.) Davenport (III 4) was their teacher.

In 1836, he "took up" quite a tract of land in Michigan for himself and brothers. The country was then in a wild state and he was compelled to employ Indian guides to locate his land. He returned to New York in 1837 and brought his wife and daughter, Elizabeth, to Lapeer County and located on his farm in the wilderness.

The nearest market for his produce was Auburn, 25 miles away, and "thither he hauled his grain and brought back with him provisions for his family." Robert Davenport was one of the voters at the first town meeting held at Hadley, being one of fourteen who voted on that occasion.

The Lamoreux (L'Amoreux, Lamereaux) Family

Among the early refugees from religious persecution in France after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes (1685) was André Lamoreux, shipmaster and pilot of Meschers, province of Charente Inferieure, a short distance below Bordeaux. With his wife, Susanne Latour and 2 children, Elizabeth and Jacques, they went to Bristol, England. Their names appear in church records there. On Dec. 16, 1689, the christening of a daughter Judith is noted; Mar. 19, 1690, burial of a son Jacques; Jan. 7, 1694, christening of son Daniel (born Dec. 24, 1693); on Dec. 1, 1695, a second son Daniel was christened (born Nov. 29, 1695). This Daniel is the ancestor of the American branch.

June 22, 1694, André took out papers (naturalization) for himself, his wife, Elizabeth and Judith. They were in New York as early as May 15, 1700 and descendants resided there and in New Rochelle (C. W. Baird's, the Huguenot Emigration to America, Vol. 11, p. 37)

May 29, 1720, at the French Church in New York, was the christening of Daniel, son of Daniel and Jeanne Masse (or Massee) Lamoreux, who had married on June 28, 1719. Their second son, André, was christened Jan. 17, 1722.

The 1703 Census, New York City (Doc. Hist. of N.Y., Vol. 1, p. 620) shows "Andrew Lamorue" a resident of the West Ward with a family of 2 adults over 16 and 2 children, Judith and Daniel. Elizabeth had married Gerret Dusjean. On May 4, 1706, Lord Cornbury signed an order discharging "Andrew L'Amoureux", captain of a merchantman, from impressment (into military service). There is no more mention of André. The last mention of his wife Suzanne is that of 1720 when she acted as godmother for Daniel, her grandson, son of Daniel and Jeanne (Masse) Lamoreux.

Daniel, son of André, was a "cordwainer" or bootmaker. He and his wife Jeanne (Masse) Lamoreux had 9 children.

1. Daniel, born May 10, 1720, in New York and was a Loyalist
2. André, born Jan. 10, 1722, in New York

7. Isaac, born Nov. 15, 1732, in New Rochelle
8. Suzanne, born Dec. 26, 1736, and christened by Mr. Stourgine (Sturgeon), a Presbyterian minister at Bedford, Mar. 5, 1737
9. Josue (Joshua), born Jan. 9, 1739, probably at Philipstown, N.Y. The godfather named was Francois Lent of Cortlandt Manor. Joshua married Elizabeth Ogdan born 1738 in Dutchess County where some of his 7 children were born. He lived in New Brunswick, then upper Canada, Toronto, etc. Descendants settled in Ohio, and the Utah branch was established by Andrew and David Lamoreaux who traveled to the territory with Brigham Young.

A son of André (Andrew) is believed to have been the Jesse who married Jane Wetmore, Aug. 15, 1782.

André (Andrew, born 1722) married Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac Covert, of Cortlandt Manor, Jan. 30, 1743. As some of their grandchildren are recorded as having been born in Putnam County, N.Y., it is believed that they resided in Philipstown for many years. They then moved to Yorktown, Westchester County, where he died Nov. 28, 1809.

I 8. Phoebe Davenport, daughter of Thomas the pioneer, by his second wife, Elizabeth Leggett. No records.

I 9. Robert Davenport, son of Thomas the pioneer, by his second wife, Elizabeth Leggett.

It is a supposition that this Robert is a brother of Oliver (Section IX, I 6); we know that Oliver had land in Susquehanna Valley (Pa.) and this brother could have gone there with him. The daughter mentioned seems to have been an only child as she inherited Robert's sword.

"He was a soldier in the Revolution" and family tradition says that he was at Wyoming in Capt. Whittlesey's Company at Forty-Fort at the time of the massacre. He escaped and is known to have been in the Highlands later, and at West Point in 1780 when Arnold committed his treachery. He lost an arm defending Fort ------- (N.Y.) This is quite possible, as Col. Zebulon Butler was in command at Wyoming and he later was the commander of the 4th Conn. Regiment in the Hudson Highlands. Companies of this regiment were encamped on

Thomas Davenport's farm. Tradition claims that Robert and his daughter were here. In 1788 he lived at Amenia, Dutchess Co., N.Y. Compare Sec. IX, Oliver I 6, Robert II 2, and copy of service record. (Ed. Note: See "The Three Roberts" ff.)

II 1. One daughter, HANNAH, is on record, born Oct. 18, 1769; died Mar. 7, 1842, at Newfield, N.Y. About 1788, she married James Ford who was born in Ireland and arrived in New York about 1775 in a troopship. He deserted, swam the Hudson, and joined the American army and was a "fifer" in the Dutchess County regiment. He died at Newfield, N.Y. Soon after their marriage, they went to Plymouth, Luzerne Co., Pa., where their children were born, and later they moved to Tompkins Co., N.Y.

It is probable that at least one member of the Davenport family, descendants of Thomas, the Philipstown pioneer, was among the first settlers of the Susquehanna Company in Luzerne County, Pa. The name Danford appears on the original list, but the first name is so obliterated that it is impossible to read. It is generally accepted by historians of Luzerne County and the Wyoming Valley that this was Robert Davenport. Hendrick Wright, in Historical Sketches of Plymouth, Luzerne Co., Pa., p. 382, states a belief that this pioneer Robert was the father of the Thomas Davenport who came to settle in Plymouth after the Revolution, and whose name appears on the Assessment Roll of 17--. We know this to be an error—Thomas Davenport (above) being the son of Oliver Davenport who deeded his lands in the Wyoming Valley to this son before making his will in 1800. For Thomas Davenport, son of Oliver, grandson of Thomas the pioneer, see Section IX, Oliver I 6, Thomas II 1.

Some information relative to that settlement is in order. Plymouth is one of 17 townships in this part of Pennsylvania, the territory of which was vested in the Susquehanna Company, and known under the name of the Connecticut Charter. The grant was made Apr. 20, 1662, to the Connecticut Colony by Charles II in which that monarch recognized the grant as the same which had been previously made by King James I in 1620 to the Plymouth Company.

For a full one hundred years no attempt was made by the New Englanders to settle on the Susquehanna. In 1762, a few settlers went out, cleared and planted lands and returned to Connecticut for the winter. The following spring they returned to the Susquehanna Valley, remaining until October. In that month, Indians attacked the settlement, massacring, burning and pillaging.

Between 1763 and 1768, settlers from Pennsylvania moved into the Valley. Meanwhile a meeting of the Susquehanna Company was held at Hartford, Conn., Dec. 28, 1768, and plans made to send settlers into the Valley the following spring. Five townships, each five miles square—Plymouth, Kingston, Hanover, Wilkes-Barre, and Pittston—were laid out, each to be granted to 200 settlers. Forty of these set out from Connecticut early in the spring of 1769; the remaining 160 destined for Plymouth to follow twelve months later. (Pearce, Annals of Luzerne County, p. 63).

Plymouth was the most desirable of all the Yankee townships (ultimately 17) because of the broad sweep of remarkable fertile land which skirted its southeast border. Its area of from two to three thousand acres, without forests, invited the plough-shares of the hardy pioneer.

From the arrival of the Yankee settlers, there was constant and mounting friction between them and the Pennsylvanians. At various times the friction became active war. During the Revolution, the two groups united against a common foe and both resisted the raid by Col. John Butler and his British, Tory, and Indian army of invasion, July 4-5, 1778. This raid, which destroyed the two Pennsylvanian and two Yankee forts and in which uncounted numbers of settlers were killed, culminated in the horrors of the Wyoming Massacre. From the scalping parties and burnings, refugees fled into the Swamp of Death, and down the river, as well as into the forests or the mountains.

According to the story told her descendants by Hannah Davenport Ford, later of Tompkins Co., N.Y., who was born 1769, (see her tombstone at Newfield, Tompkins Co.) she was the daughter of Robert Davenport who was a settler at Plymouth. Hannah was a child of nine when Butler's raiders attacked Forty-Fort, the fort at Plymouth. She, with others, including her father, escaped on a raft down the Susquehanna. Later, Sept.-Oct. 1781, she was with her father at West Point at the time Benedict Arnold perpetrated his treason. In 1788, Robert Davenport was at Amenia, N.Y., and here that same year, Hannah Davenport married James Ford. They immediately set out for Luzerne County, Pa., where their 10 children were born. From this account, given by Hannah to her children and grandchildren, it would seem that she inherited her father Robert Davenport's land in Luzerne County. What became of her father, last heard of at Amenia, is not known.

At the time of the Wyoming Massacre, no fewer than three Robert Davenports, all descended from the Philipstown pioneer, were men in active years of life. These three were: (1) Robert, (I 9) son of the Pioneer, and one of his minor children at the time of his death 1759; (2) Robert, (II 6) son of the Pioneer's son Thomas, (I 1) whose date of birth is not known, but which was probably between 1750-1760; and (3) Robert, (II 2) son of Oliver, (I 6) a son of the Pioneer.

To increase the mystery of the three Robert Davenports, we have the application for Revolutionary War pension filed by Robert, son of Oliver Davenport, in which he states that he was wounded in the arm at the attack by the British on Fort Montgomery, on the Hudson, October 1777, and the following year was at the Battle of Wyoming (Luzerne County, Pa.). This Robert Davenport married Suzanna Lamoreux, and had among other children, a daughter Hannah, who married Daniel Meloy. See Section IX, Oliver I 6, Robert II 2.

Oliver Davenport, father of Robert, owned land in Luzerne County and went there from his home at Cheesecocks (Monroe), Orange County, N.Y., shortly after the Revolution. At this time, he took with him, his son Thomas Davenport, and deeded the property to him. Thomas Davenport's name appears on the Assessment Roll of Luzerne County, 179-, but there is no mention on that Roll of Oliver or Robert Davenport. Oliver Davenport returned to Cheesecocks, N.Y.

I 10. Hannah (Anner) Davenport, daughter of Thomas the pioneer, by his second wife, Elizabeth Leggett, married Isaac Van Amburgh, Feb. 13, 1770. Children: at least 2 (Van Amburgh)

II 1. Robert

2. Abraham, who married Nellie (or Elenor) Knapp, and had

III 1. Isaac, born in the town of Fishkill, May 26, 1808, and attended the small schoolhouse at Johnsville, built in 1794. At 19, Isaac left home, engaged in several business ventures, then became connected with the menagerie of Raymond & Co. This was the largest menagerie which had been collected up to that time.

"After performing feats which no man had heretofore attempted with wild animals, it was announced through the press that Van Amburgh would enter the den of lions like Daniel of old... Strong appeals were made to the manager from the pulpit and the press, imploring him to desist from such an undertaking... In the fall of 1833, at the Richmond Hill Theatre, Van Amburgh performed a feat with the lions and tigers that, with the exception of the prophet Daniel, had baffled the skill and sagacity of man in all former ages. He volunteered to drive through Broadway in a chariot drawn by lions and tigers, but the authorities interfered".

(Henry DuBois Bailey, Local Tales and Historical Sketches, Fishkill Landing, N.Y. John W. Spaight, 1874. The author of this memoir was a boyhood friend of Van Amburgh.)

Bailey further tells that Van Amburgh's fame rapidly spread throughout the United States; that many of his old schoolmates, including Bailey, went to New York to see Isaac Van Amburgh enter the den of lions and tigers. The spectacle was described as "sublime and fearful".

The greatest animal trainer of his day, Van Amburgh soon had a show of his own with which he toured this country and Europe. He appeared before Queen Victoria, who was so fascinated with his performances that she went on the stage to see the animals fed and then issued orders for a command performance at Drury Lane on Jan. 29, 1839, with full court regalia.

A song called "The Menagerie" popular years ago had a verse as follows:

"Van Amburgh is the man who goes to all the shows,
He goes into the lions' den, and tells you all he knows,
He sticks his head into the lion's mouth, and keeps it there awhile,
And when he takes it out again, he greets you with a smile."

A handbill announcing an exhibit of the Zoological Institute, No. 37 Bowery, pictures a lithe young man, Mr. Van Amburgh, the "unrivalled Conqueror and Manager of the Whole Brute Creation". The date has been approximated as 1837. (Museum of Akin Memorial Library, Quaker Hill, Pawling, N.Y.)

In 1848, Van Amburgh travelled through Fishkill with his menagerie and nearly all of the residents of the town of Fishkill and East Fishkill turned out to see him. Bailey states, "it was said this would be his last visit to his native place except as a private citizen. The writer saw him enter the cages of the lions and tigers for the last time, and with what thrilling interest did the large audience witness the wonderful control he had over those ferocious beasts of the forests. In conversation with him my mind reverted to the scenes of our childhood, when we went to school together . . . I saw at a glance that he had not deviated from the path of virtue, and had shunned the intoxication bowl. His appearance was noble; his height rather more than six feet. Age had made no impression on that powerful frame. I felt myself in the presence of more than an ordinary man . . ."

Isaac Van Amburgh, a great grandson of Thomas Davenport, the Philipstown pioneer, died Nov. 29, 1865, in Philadelphia. He is buried beside his mother in St. George's Cemetery at Newburgh, N.Y. (See, Ver Nooy, Amy, The Animals Came to Town, published in Year Book, Dutchess County Historical Society, Vol. 41, 1956)

I 11. Stephen Davenport, son of Thomas the pioneer by his second wife, Elizabeth Leggett, was born in Philipse Precinct, Dutchess County, N.Y., before 1756, and died there before 1790, as his name does not appear in the U. S. Census of that date. His widow, Mary (-----) Davenport, appears with a family of

II four sons and one daughter.
(Family records indicate Stephen married a Susanna Fork and mention a daughter Nancy who died 1793).

His leasehold extended easterly from the present Village of Nelsonville, with its westerly bound resting approximately on the Peekskill Road, leading from the village to Margaret's Brook (and past the Cold Spring Cemetery). Near this west line, Stephen Davenport built his log habitation which in later times was replaced by a frame structure. (In his History of Putnam County, p. 150, Blake says that this frame house was built by Oliver Davenport. This is evidently a mistake. It is known that Oliver was married before 1760, and then living in Orange County, N.Y. There is no evidence to show he ever had a residence here (Philipstown). Blake also states, p. 150, that the above Stephen Davenport was a brother of the pioneer, which must be an error).

After the survey and division of Water Lot No. 2, into farms in 1802, Mary Davenport, described as the widow of Stephen Davenport, became the lessee of farm No. 34, containing 509 acres, and bounded on the west and south by farm No. 33 occupied by Isaac Davenport, and north by farm No. 35, in possession of Thomas Sutton, which proves that she did not change her home at that time and occupied the land formerly in possession of her late husband, Stephen Davenport. She probably died in the old house on the corner, and the improvements passed to the Philipse family before 1817.

A Stephen Davenport of New York City was appointed, Aug. 27, 1785, administrator of the estate of his nephew, Thomas Davenport of Philipstown, Dutchess Co., N.Y. (Liber 13, p. 389, New York Wills, New York Historical Society Publications)

I 12. Abigail Davenport, daughter of Thomas the pioneer by his second wife, Elizabeth Leggett, born 1746; married 1763, Henry Ostrom (Oostrom); born in Holland 1741, died in Schenectady, N.Y., 1797. During the Revolution, Capt. Henry Ostrom commanded a Company of 3rd Regiment, Albany County Militia under Col. Philip Schuyler. (N.Y. Historical Record, Vol. 69)
